A BOARD OF COMMERCE FORMED [illegible]ANEE

AT A BANQUET GIVEN IN THE TOWN HALL [illegible]URSDAY EVENING OF LAST WEEK

An Interesting and Instructive address by Mr. [illegible]ce Green a feature of the Programme

Some weeks ago Mayor Robinson and the members of the Town Council decided to hold a banquet for the citizens and business men of Napanee in order to promote a spirit of good fellowship and underlying it the "Get Together" idea to further the interests of the town and to organize a live Board of Commerce should the idea meet with the approval of the meeting.

Mr. C. Price Green, whom a committee of the council interviewed recently in Toronto promised to come to Napanee and address a meeting of the citizens. The event was organized by the council and the only reason that there were not more citizens present was because the hall could not any more tables. Places were laid for nearly two hundred people and nearly every place was filled when the hour for the banquet arrived. The hall was tastefully decorated the work of the hydro electric staff and some members of the staff of the Robinson Co.

Following the banquet Mayor Robinson explained the object of the gathering and some of his objectives while Mayor of Napanee His most cherished idea was to "Make the Town a better place to live in" but financial difficulties on every side make it impossible to carry out all the ideas which could be formed for the general good of the town. He made an earnest plea to every citizen to do something, however little for the general good, speaking of the possibilities of securing manufacturing industries for the town the mayor made the statement that manufacturers are now in quest of sites in the smaller towns in order to give their employees an opportunity to live normal lives which is getting to be an impossibility in the large cities and one object of the evening's gathering was to make the citizens of Napanee more fraternal and to create an enthusiasm for the good of Napanee. Even small things count and every citizen must give something back to the country or the country is the loser of in making them as citizens.

The speaker of the evening was Mr. C. Price Green, Industrial Commissioner of the Canadian National Railways. On rising to speak Mr. Green expressed a feeling of honor in meeting so large and representative gathering of the citizens. He was greatly interested in the movement for the betterment of the smaller towns and had a message of inspiration to give to the meeting. The great question is "How can Napanee best utilize its resources to the betterment of the town." Why has Napanee's population declined during the past 30 years, and what has this decline cost Napanee in dollars and cents. The speaker estimated that if Napanee had held its normal growth it would have a population of 18,000 today and the emigration has cost the town $15,000,000 in dollars. Should not Napane [illegible] any small industries which might have been big factories now. The people of Napanee have not grown up to their own resources and they are the people who must do so, must put their own money into small industries which will prove. The best industrial towns in Canada to-day have been developed and are being developed largely by the brains and energy of their own citizens. Organize and get the best men possible at the head of your organization. Steady plugging in the long run is the sure road to success. Mr. Green pointed out object lessons in the growth of other small places in Ontario by organized effort on the part of their citizens. Such efforts are appreciated by the management of the Canadian National Railways which is ready at all times to assist in any way possible and to give advice when asked by town organizations.

The main theme of Mr. Green's address was "The Natural Resources of Canada," a subject which Mr. Green has given a close study but which could only be lightly touched upon during the course of an evening's address. While briefly giving his audience a glimse of the vast possibilities of Canada's resources in pulpwood, coal, iron, gold, silver, etc. his address das very interesting. The wonderful possibilities of the mining industry in the Cobalt Ontario district was a revelation to his hearers and was used as an illustration to bring home to the citizens of Napanee the fact that they have a splendid country to the north of [illegible] besides the splendid agricultural resources around. Coming back to Napanee affairs Mr. Green advised the meeting to organize and as a prerequisite get a good live President and Secretary and particularly a live Secretary. To make the movement a success the members must attend the meetings and give their hearty support to every movement which will aid in the betterment of the town. Make your money in your town. Make your stores attractive. Have a retail section in your organization. Napanee is a beautiful town and you have everything here to inspire citizens to go ahead. There is a time in the history of every place when action leads to fortune and this is Napanee's opportunity, were some of the suggestions offered by Mr. Green.

During the course of the evening Mr. Neal of To[illegible] delighted the audience with [illegible]songs and responded [illegible]e repeated encheres which g[illegible] his every appearance on the [illegible]form. Mr. Edwards, an enter[illegible]ner of Toronto, kept the au[illegible]ce in high good humor with [illegible]tively singing and character [illegible]eches and led the singing of the [illegible]choruses by the audience.

The piano used [illegible] from the warerooms of Mr. [illegible] Allen and the ability of Prof. Baird as accompanist left [illegible]thing to be desired in the musical line.

The catering was done by Mr. A. E. Caton and he may well be proud of the succ[illegible] of the lunch. The tables were [illegible]ctively decorated and the lunch all that could be expected for an occasion of this sort.

Mr. E. R. Checkley in a short forming a Board of Commerce ? speech brought the matter of forming a Board of Commerce before the meeting in the form of a resolution that such a Board be formed. He expressed the idea that if a Board of Commerce would help to build up the town by all means let us have one. We have two main lines of Railway, a splendid surrounding country and every chance to make good. Mr. J. W. Robinson in seconding the resolution complimented the organizers on the success of the evening and advised the young men present to get into the work of the town and help the town and themselves at the same time. He also complimented Mr. Green on the splendid address given by him and kind words had spoken regarding Napanee.

Mayor Robinson in putting the resolution said that he had been room he would liked to have seen a large representation of the farmers of the surrounding country also present at this banquet.

Mr. Geo. W. Gibbard moved that a membership list for a Board of Commerce be circulated at the meeting. Mr. J. L. Boyes in seconding the resolution expressed the hope that the elected officers would put enough effort into the work to make the movement a success and complimented those in charge on the success of the evening.

Mr. W. A. Grange moved that the following officers be the provisional officers of the Board for the purpose of organization and to call a subsequent meeting at which permanent officers will be elected, fees fixed, and the work of organization completed.

President—Mr. T. B. Wallace

Secretary—M. G. Patton Parr.

Executive—Mr. R. R. White, G. W. Gibbard, J. W. Robinson, J. G. Daly, P. Gibson, W. S. Herrington, D. B. Wilson, and E. R. Checkley.

Rev. J. H. H. Coleman congratulated the Mayor and Council on the success of their efforts and gave expression to the feeling of gratitude of the meeting to Mr. Green on his inspiring and educational address. Napanee will undoubtedly rise to its opportunities and the meeting owed to Mr. Green an expression of gratitude in pointing out to the citizens the opportunities which lie before the town.

Mr. W. G. Wilson county clerk, seconded the resolution which was carried unanimously by the audience rising and singing "For he's a jolly good fellow."

Mayor Robinson tendered the thanks of the meeting to Mr. Green who made a very complimentary reply coupled with the advice to the citizens that though they may not agree with all the actions of the Board of Commerce or its members, still they owe it their hearty support for the general good of the community.

Mr. Wilson also moved a hearty vote of thanks to the Mayor and Council in providing so successful an evening's entertainment.

Dr. Simpson also joined in an expression of appreciation of the good work being done by the council. This was responded to by everyone singing "For they are jolly good fellows" and the singing of the National Anthem closed the evening.

More Land for Soldiers.

The Soldier Settlement Board announces that action is being taken to dispose of 75,000 acres of Hudson Bay reserve lands, which have been cancelled by the crown, situated in the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, and 10,400 acres of Doukhobor reserve lands near Kamsack, Sask.

The opening of a further area of 30,000 acres, now held within grazing leases, will be arranged for as soon as their release, now being negotiated for, can be secured.

Within the area being thrown open there are a number of quarter-sections that are specially valuable, some ranging as high as $2,000, because of the quality of the soil and their nearness to populated centres. These lands will be advertised and sold at a reasonable price, and the proceeds applied to a reserve fund for the purpose of offsetting settlement losses, and in aiding returned men physically disabled, but whose condition and circumstances necessitate their being sent on the land. The balance of the area, comprising a considerable proportion of it, will be thrown open about April 30 for soldier grant entry, and assistance will be given in the form of loans for stock and equipment to all whose knowledge of farming will enable them to proceed with the development and operation of their lands.

As Man to Man.

"Doctor, I want to discuss a matter with you," said a man, stopping his medical adviser in the street; "but not in your professional capacity."

"I'm listening," said the doctor.

"It's about my liver."

"As a physician, I can't discuss your liver except in my professional capacity."

"Hang it all, doctor!" snapped the man. "I don't mind paying you a fee, but I'd like to know what you would do for my liver if it were yours."

Prince Given Police Command.

It was announced by the Government in the House of Commons a few days ago that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, had consented to become honorary commandant of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the new name of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. In a cable message from London it was stated that the prince was highly pleased with the work of the police as his escort in Western Canada, and that he was an ardent admirer of the force.

Moss Bread.

A kind of bread is made along the Columbia river by the Indians from a moss that grows on the spruce fir tree. This moss is prepared by placing it in heaps, sprinkling it with water and permitting it to ferment. Then it is rolled into balls as big as a man's head, and these are baked in pits.

CARRANZA IS SLAIN

President of Mexico Killed by Enemies.

He Surrendered After Being Followed to the Mountains, to Which He Fled When His Government Fell —His Bodyguard Is Safe, But Obregon Charges Them With Cowardice.

MEXICO CITY, May 25.—Venustiano Carranza, who fled from this city on May 6, and who took flight into the mountains of Puebla following a battle near Rinconada, was killed at one o'clock Thursday morning at Tlaxcalantongo, according to official announcement here.

He was killed by troops under Gen. Rodolfo Herrero, a former federal soldier of the Diaz regime, the message from Obregon stated.

Carranza's chief followers, who were with him when he died, addressed a message to Gen. Pablo Gonzales, protesting the assassination of their chief. This message was not permitted here by Obregon with his answer. The Carranza leaders said Carranza had been made a prisoner and assassinated in a "cowardly manner."

The message from the Carranza followers said Herrero violated the hospitality he had offered Carranza, and that the assassination took place with cries of "vive Obregon" from Herrero and his men.

Obregon, in his answer to this message, arraigned Carranza's followers for allowing him to be assassinated.

The messages received by the provisional Government show that members of the party of Venustiano Carranza resisted the forces of Gen. Rudolfo Herrera until finally overpowered. Sixty members of the Carranza party were taken prisoner, their exact whereabouts being unknown at this time.

Among these prisoners is Marie Mendes, former director of the Government telegraphic lines. Another is Paulino Fontes, former director of the National Railway lines.

The hero of Venustiano Carranza party was Gen. Francisco Margula, who with others, offered a desperate resistance while able. Gen. Margula himself fought desperately until shot and killed. Three other members of the resisting party also were killed, among them being Gen. Pasqual Morales Molina.

These details of the massacre were communicated to Gen. Obregon by Generals Juan Barragan, who was Carranza's chief of staff; Francisco Mariel, and several others. They make mention of the fact that Gen. Pelaecia a joined Carranza at the town of Patla, offering to protect the deposed President. At that time Gen. Herrera and his men surrounded the advance guard of the Carranzista force.

However, at daybreak on Friday, Herrera and his men surrounded the hut at Tlaxcalantongo where Carranza and his party were sleeping. The revolting officer directed his men to open a rifle fire on the former President. All members of the Carranza party who offered the slightest resistance were despatched.

Gen. Obregon's message from Mexico City to Roberto Pesqueira, financial agent of the defacto government here, said:

"I am transmitting the following message received yesterday from Saxa:

"'Early this morning, at the town of Tlaxcalaltogo, the President of the republic, Venustiano Carranza, was made a prisoner and cowardly assassinated at the ery hour of dawn, by Col. Rodolfo Herrero and his men, violating the hospitality that had been offered them by the deceased.

"'The undersigned of this message protest with all their energy, honor and loyalty to the entire world this new stain which has fallen upon our country. After having complied with our duty which our honor as soldiers and friends of Carranza imposed on us, we are at your service and we only ask permission to allow us to take the body of our worthy chief to the last dwelling place at the capital city, requesting you to order a special train for this purpose to Beristain.'"

This communication, according to Gen. Obregon's message, was signed by Generals Juan Barragan, F. de P. Mariel, Federico Montes and Marciano Gonzales, Colonels Cesareo, Lieut.- Col. D. M. Fernandez, Col. F. Lima and other officers.

"I have answered the foregoing message as follows," Gen. Obregon's communication continued:

"Your wire to Gen. Pablo Gonzales. It is very painful that a group of officers who are vouching their loyalty and honor like yourselves and were accompanying President Carranza with unlimited duty of protecting him, should have allowed him to be assassinated without complying with your duty to the last hour, before the people of the republic and the people of the world, that you should have shared his fate. More so when the whole nation knows that you are the only ones responsible for the unfortunate happenings of the last few weeks, and which had such a regrettable finale in the death of Venustiano Carranza, which found him abandoned by his closest friends, who at the critical moment failed in their duty to protect him.

"'On repeated occasions, President Carranza was notified that every guarantee would be given him if he would be willing to leave the danger zone, but he refused to accept this offer because he undoubtedly considered it an undignified act on the part of honor to save himself, leaving his companions in danger; this act of Carranza reveals the high degree of good fellowship which you failed to appreciate.

"'There are signed to the message the names of 32 officers and one civilian, which is more than sufficient in number, if they would have done their duty, to have saved the Carranza's life, if, as you state, he was assassinated."

JOLTING HIGH PRICES

High Cost of Living May Go Down Shortly

Action of the Bankers In the United States Has Resulted In Cuts Ranging From 25 to 75 Per Cent. In Everything Except Clothing, and Result of the Slump Is Likely to Be Felt In Canada.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Advertisements in newspapers of New York and other United States cities gave convincing proof of the comprehensiveness of price deflations in retail lines except food, that ranged from 20 to 75 per cent., with the largest reductions occurring in commodities classified as luxuries.

The current deflation is attributed to the trend in economy that has taken possession of the public. Some specific effects follow:

Furs are cheaper. A Fifth avenue fur for $75 which were held for $100 several weeks ago. Shoes that were selling at $20 are now offered at $11.75. A woman's suit priced at $245 may be had for $100 less.

Men's clothing has dropped in proportion. Blue serges at $28.50. Palm Beach suits have dropped from last year's price of $20 to $12. Colors that climbed to $40 are being offered as low as 21 cents.

Delegates to the convention of the National Association of Manufacturers are now holding frequent with intense interest. It was the consensus of opinion among them that the trend is healthful and will not be followed by harmful reactions.

"For more than three years, retailers have been competing with each other to get goods," said J. Philip Bird, general manager of the association, "and this competition has resulted in an over-inflation of credit. They have unwisely run up prices as high as the traffic would stand and in the natural reaction the public refuses to buy."

W. N. Jones of the Norma Co. of America, said that he did not believe that the present reductions would cause a loss to the retailers. He was of the opinion that the reductions have not been made on the original prices of commodities, but on the profiteering that has been made during the last three years.

"Dealers have been raising prices without an economic basis," he said. "The present situation is due to laborers and others, who made high wages during the war, embarking in an orgy of spending. They sold Liberty Bonds to spend on luxuries. Now, the retailers are alarmed. When one retailer cuts, it sets an example for the others, and general reductions follow all along the line."

Owners of department stores in scores of cities have announced price reductions ranging from 25 per cent. on apparel, ranging from 20 to 50 per cent., while in some places shoes and other articles were cut.

While the movement which assumed nation-wide proportions continues to spread, banking interests in New York announced that the policy of deflation of credits and high commodity prices, carrying out their pledge to the Federal Reserve Board. Pressure exerted by the banks on the wholesale dry goods and general merchandise districts were said to be responsible for the wave of price cutting in the retail trade.

Banks were reported to have notified importers and dealers in luxuries, articles and commodities that delivery of so-called non-essentials that only moderate financial accommodation could be extended now.

From conservative financial quarters came assurances that basic financial conditions all over the country offer no occasion for apprehension. In the words of a financial writer, the movement movement is largely in the nature of a "necessary re-adjustment of values, including commercial and industrial activities."

An official of the Merchants' Association said he believed there was a decided reaction from the spirit of excess in the retail market, although this was hampered by the freight tieup which is causing a shortage of supplies in the metropolis. He said that a reduction in price was noticeable over and above the reductions made by clothing and department stores indirect to cleaning out their spring stocks.

William Fellows Morgan, president of the Merchants' Association, in discussing the situation, said in part:

"The reduction of the prices of merchandise, which now seems to be prevalent in this country, was bound to have been anticipated, it was inevitable as one of the steps of deflation which we must go through in order to regain a healthful balance. The necessary preparations for the shrinkage of values, which really means an increase in the value of the dollar were long under way by the banks.

"The re-adjustment has been retarded by the interruption of the transportation lines, especially in this city. The tendency of this interference with the free movement of merchandise has been to keep prices at high level and increase profiteering by cutting off supplies. The fact that food prices have not declined, I believe to be attributable mainly, if not entirely, to this cause. As progress toward normal conditions will be accelerated and the danger of distance will be lessened by putting a stop to transportation holdups, which constitute a menace to the entire community."

Noske to Disband Army.

BERLIN, May 25.—Gustav Noske, former Minister of Defence, says Vossische Zeitung, may be appointed to conduct the disbandment of what are called the old German army. This task is stated to be exceptionally complicated and difficult, as it must be carried out with the greatest possible delay. Noske's influence in military quarters, it is pointed out will enable him to carry out the disbandment quickly and satisfactorily.

A Real "Nickel."

Sir Henry Drayton, Canadian Minister of Finance, stated in the House of Commons a few days ago that the government was under consideration the coining of a nickel five-cent piece. Sir Henry, speaking on a resolution to reduce the fineness of silver currency, said that at present the silver coinage was on the basis of 925 parts out of 1,000 being pure silver. Owing to the increase in price of silver, the Government proposed to reduce the standard to 800 parts of silver.

Sir Henry added that at the present time silver dollars were being coined at a loss instead of a profit.

TRAITOR NOW A SAINT.

Oliver Plunkett Was Beatified at Rome.

ROME, May 25.—Oliver Plunkett, the Irish divine who was made Archbishop of Armagh in 1669 by Pope Clement IX., and who was executed for treason at Tyburn, July, 1681, was beatified on Sunday with fitting ceremony.

The ceremony of beatification took place in the Basilica. In the procession were Count George Plunkett, representing the family of the archbishop, Sir T. Grantam Emonde and family, Sean O'Ceallaigh, member of the "Irish Parliament," and the vice-mayor and members of the municipal council of Dublin.

It had been originally announced the mass would be celebrated by Archbishop Edward Insley, of Birmingham, but Irish bishops objected to the choice of an Englishman for the service, and Mons. Peitro Paelo, canon of St. Pensif's Church, officiated. Mons. Hagan, rector of the Irish College, delivered to the Pope in the name of the postulators, a reliquary containing fragments of the bones of the archbishop. This reliquary was a replica of the shrine which contains the bell of St. Patrick in Dublin.

The Papal Bull announcing the beatification was read, the relics were exposed and a Te Deum was chanted. Then the curtain before the picture of the new saint was withdrawn, and the bell of St. Peter's rang out the tidings, being answered by peals from other churches throughout the city.

There was a great concourse when Pope Benedict, in the midst of gorgeously-robed and uniformed dignitaries and scores of the faithful, visited the Basilica to beatify the relics.

Cardinal Logue, the octogenarian Primate of All Ireland, headed the list of distinguished ecclesiastics present. With him were Archbishop Clune, of Perth, Archbishop of Cashel, fifteen Irish bishops and may Irish abbots and pilgrims. There were also in attendance several church dignitaries from Canada, including Archbishop Spratt of Kingston, and Bishop O'Brien, of Peterboro, and Bishop Leblanc, of St. John, N. B. Australia was represented by Archbishop Kelly, of Sydney.

TAYLOR STEPS OUT.

Retirement of Irish Official Is Significant.

LONDON, May 25.—It is officially announced that Sir John Taylor, has retired from his position as under-Secretary in the office of the Chief Secretary for Ireland, and is to be succeeded, "during the present pressure of business," by A. W. Cope, assistant secretary to the Minister of Pensions. During the same period, Sir John Anderson, chairman of the Board of Inland Revenue, is to act as Joint Under-Secretary, as well as Under-Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant.

Sir John Taylor's retirement has been anticipated, though only a few days ago it was announced that his leave of absence had been extended for a month. He has forty years' service to his credit and is looked upon by the Irish as one of those who maintained the old traditions of Dublin Castle.

Comment on the retirement of Sir John, the London Times, says that his knowledge extended to the turbulent days of the eighties and it is believed that the advice which he tendered has been in favor of drastic measures. His retirement, adds the Times, will be regarded in Ireland as evidence that more moderate counsels are likely to prevail in the future.

The Times concludes: "There is little doubt that the administration machine of Dublin Castle has fallen into disrepair and has long required thorough overhaul. The plain of present conditions in Ireland has completely deranged it, and these appointments probably foreshadow complete reorganization of the Chief Secretary's office and a different orientation of policy."

DYER MILDLY REPROVED.

Report on Amritsar Massacres May Cause Trouble.

LONDON, May 25.—The report of the committee appointed by the Government to inquire into the Amritsar "massacre," will be published this morning the Parliamentary recess. The Daily Herald, the labor organ, published an authoritative forecast of the report. This report is that the majority of the committee of inquiry is that Gen. Dyer, who commanded the British troops, "committed a grave error of judgment" in "prolonging the firing" on the crowd in Jallianwala Bagh (a suburb of Amritsar).

The majority report is signed only by the European members of the committee. There is a strong minority report signed by the three Indian members, which condemns in uncompromising language the shootings and the authorities responsible for it. The attitude of the crowds from airplanes is held by the majority to have been unavoidable. For the rest there is some mild criticism of some of the subordinate officers, such as Col. Johnson's treatment of Indian officers. The effect of this report on the Indian public will be most grave, the Daily Herald predicts.

Ulster Village Organized.

BELFAST, Ireland, May 25.—The village of Ballybay, Ulster, has been given the lead in an organized effort to deal with Sinn Feinism. The Ulster Volunteers have been reformed and pickets established.

At midnight Sunday a sergeant, returning home, saw an armed mob round his house. He notified the patrol, the mill siren was sounded, and the villagers turned out in a body. The Sinn Feiners promptly decamped and did not renew the attack.

The body of seven-year-old Victor Bishop was discovered floating on Toronto harbor three weeks after his disappearance.

Has Sent Defiant Note.

PARIS, May 25.—Mustapha Kemal Pasha, the Turkish nationalist leader, has addressed a note to the Peace Conference, declaring that his Government will not recognize engagements entered into between the Constantinople Government and the Governments of other powers, according to the Journal des Debats.

Mustapha Kemal asserts that the Constantinople officials have no authority to act for Turkey, while the Nationalist Government has obtained a mandate from the people.

The Falcons left Toronto for Winnipeg Thursday night.

The receipt of hogs, according to the official board, was 2720, with the market in a very unsettled condition. Buyers for the big plants stayed away yesterday that the market locally was out of line with the conditions obtaining elsewhere, and there was a feeling under a handicap, the Canadian market being higher.

No Shortage of Sugar.

NEW YORK, May 25.—"The so-called shortage of sugar does not exist," declared Thomas Adams Bickle, who has investigated available supplies with the help of the Department of Justice and representatives of the refining industries. Sugar prices represent pure inflation, caused through hoarding by sugar speculators."

He said that with the sugar that has already been received in the United States and the amounts contracted for and available on the Cuban market, an increase of more than 500,000 tons over last year's total consumption is in sight.

"When we started this investigation, we thought, as everyone did, that there really was a shortage. Our purpose was to discover where the sugar was and to compel it to be put in our business. When we discovered the facts, we called a meeting of the association."

Lumber Shortage In Alberta.

Curtailment of the amount of lumber exported from Canada to the United States which the Alberta Association of Architects has put before the Federal Government, the Edmonton architects assert that the situation is desperate if the big building program in sight for the coming season is to be carried out. The association urges that the needs of western Canada should be considered first and the exportation of lumber to the United States prohibited or curtailed until such time as there is an adequate supply of lumber for future building undertakings in Canada.

Eats Many Bugs.

A cliff swallow will eat a thousand fleas, mosquitoes, wheat midgets or beetles that injure fruit trees in a day, and, therefore, is to be encouraged. This bird is also known as the cave swallow because it plasters its nest on the outside of a barn or other building up under the eaves. Colonies of several thousand will build their nests together on the side of a cliff. These nests, shaped like a flattened gourd or water-bottle, are made of bits of clay rolled into pellets and lined with straw or feathers. This bird winters in the tropics.

With your fingers! You can lift off any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of foot.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callus. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No humbug!

A NEW KIND OF HOSPITAL.

Toronto to Have Institution to Investigate Mental Cases.

Manitoba is the first province in Canada to have what is known as a psychopathic hospital. But thanks to the efforts of a certain progressive element of the medical profession it looks as if Ontario will rank second in this connection.

This type of hospital is designed to accommodate patients who are suspected of suffering from mental trouble. Here they are observed and studied, and measures are taken which may serve to prevent the further progress of the disease.

As matters now stand in Toronto and elsewhere, a person whose actions are such that he is suspected of being mentally deranged, is sent to some such place as the Haven or the jail. There are no proper facilities in the hospitals for handling such cases, and the unfortunates, who, under more favorable conditions, might have stood a chance of recovery, are subjected to treatment which tends to put them beyond the range of help.

With the establishment of a psychopathic hospital here, a new field would be opened for those engaged in social service work. It is often impossible to judge of a case without some knowledge of the family history and surroundings. These workers could go out and investigate the conditions under which the patient lived before he was admitted to the hospital. They could study his former environment and find out if there was not some cause at home which might have been back of his trouble. Very often a patient, after two or three weeks of detention, could be discharged, but for a time, at least, he would be kept under supervision as an "out-patient." Frequently such people wander from place to place and if no record has been kept of their "history," and there happens to be a recurrence of the disease, there is no data to guide those who may later have to take up the cases, and much time is wasted.

Famous Coffee House Sold

NEVER before have so many famous estates and ancient landmarks of England been offered for sale as at the present time. In a recent issue of a London paper were put up half a dozen castles known from one end of the country to the other, and some of them celebrated in history. A place having many literary and political associations which recently changed hands was the property in Blue Ball Yard,- St. James street, London, which included the Cocoa Tree Club. Originally an offshoot of the Tory Chocolate House of the days of Queen Anne, it became one of the most noted political headquarters in England. There is a reference to it by Horace Walpole in 1746, which proves that by that time it must have become firmly established. He writes: "The Cocoa Tree has given Brigadier Mordaunt the Pretender's coach on condition that he rode up to London in it. 'That I will, sir,' said he, 'and drive till it stops at its own accord at the Cocoa Tree'." It must not be inferred from the name that the Cocoa Tree was a temperance house. Like its contempories, Almanack's, Brooke's and White's, all spoken of as coffee houses, it was the scene of notable orgies and gambling bouts.

In the social records of that period no figure stands out more prominently than Charles James Fox, one of the most reckless gamblers of the age, as well as an orator and statesman of the very highest rank. Walpole writes that in the debate on the Thirty-nine Articles, Fox did not shine, and continues: "Nor could it be wondered at. He had sat up playing at hazard at Almanack's from Tuesday evening, the 4th, until 5 in the afternoon of Wednesday the 5th. An hour before he had recovered £12,000 he had lost and by dinner, which was at 5 o'clock, he had ended by losing £11,000. On the Thursday he spoke in this debate; went to dinner at half-past eleven at night; from thence to White's, where he drank till seven the next morning; thence to Almanack's, where he won £6,000, and between three and four in the afternoon he set out for Newmarket for the races. His brother Stephen lost £11,000 two nights after, and Charles £10,000 more on the 15th. So that in a few nights the two sons of Lord Holland, the oldest not yet 25, lost some £32,000."

Fox occupied lodgings close to Brooke's and as soon as he arose, which was naturally very late, he went to the club where his political associates would gather to discuss their plans. A contemporary writer says: "His bristly black person, and shaggy breast, quite open and never purified by any ablutions, was wrapped in a foul linen nightgown, and his bushy hair disheveled. In those evil weeds and in epicurean good humor did he dictate his policies." His whole time was divided between the gambling club and the House of Commons. Like every other gambler, he was frequently hard up, lacking even the odd shillings to supply his daily needs. He might lose a thousand pounds or ten thousand pounds, which he very frequently did, and then have to borrow some loose change from the waiter. There is a well authenticated story that on one occasion he played cards with Fitzpatrick at Brooke's from ten o'clock at night until nearly six the next afternoon, a waiter being employed to stand beside the table to tell whose deal it was, the players themselves being so sleepy that they did not know.

It is probable that Fox's upbringing was as much responsible as his inherited character for the excesses of which he was guilty. His father, Lord Holland, once said: "Let nothing be done to break his spirit; the world will do that for him." On his death he left his son about three-quarters of a million dollars to pay his debts. The sum was immediately swallowed up, and in a few days Fox was as needy as before. Fox was by no means singular in his generation. High play and deep drinking were fashionable. Lord Carlisle lost £10,000 one night and owed the house the entire sum. At one time he stood to win £50,000 on the turn of a card. We refer again to Walpole: "John Damier and his two brothers have contracted a debt one can scarcely be expected to believe out of England—£70,000. Can you believe that Lord Foley's sons have borrowed money so extravagantly that the interest they have contracted in a year amounts to £18,000 a year?" It all went over the card tables in these fashionable London clubs.

Walpole records that there was a cast at hazard in the Cocoa Tree, "the difference of which amounted to £180,000. Mr. O'Birne, an Irish gamester had won £100,000 from a young Mr. Harvey who had inherited an estate from his brother. O'Birne said: "You can never pay me." The youth replied: "I can. My estate will sell for the debt." "No," said O'Birne, "I will win ten thousand. You shall throw for the odd ninety." So they threw and Harvey won. Gibbon was a member of the Cocoa Tree, and in his journal relates that every evening there one might see twenty or thirty of the first men in the kingdom in point of fashion and fortune sopping at little tables covered with a napkin, in the middle of a coffee room, upon a bit of cold meat or a sandwich and drinking a glass of punch. Lord Byron also was a member, and indeed most of the celebrities of the day were proud of their membership in what nowadays would be considered a "joint," and would speedily be raided by the police.

Whale's Hearing Acute.

The orifice on the whale's ear is scarcely perceptible, yet it is said that the whale's hearing is so acute that a ship crossing its track half a mile distant will cause it to dive instantly.

What Lauder Earns.

It is said that Sir Harry Lauder, who is booked to tour South Africa this year, will receive a salary amounting to $4,250 a week, the highest ever given to an artist in that country. He is expected to remain there for twelve weeks, so that he will collect over $50,000. Sir Harry commands $2,500 a week at home, and his pay in South Africa is proportionately higher on account of the time taken up by the voyage, during which he draws no remuneration.

Several lighthouses on the French coasts are equipped with masses that enable their lights to be seen for 60 miles.

Not Needed.

Mistress (to new servant)—Mary, why didn't you bring on the finger bowls? Didn't the lady you last worked for have them?

Servant—No, mum; her friends always washed their hands before they came.

Francis Bacon's Old Home Now Nothing But a Ruin.

How the Landmarks Decay

GORHAMBURY, the home of the great Francis Bacon, Baron Verulam and Viscount St. Albans, the "wisest, wittiest, meanest of mankind," is hard by St. Albans, that city named after the British proto-martyr, who experienced the Diocletian persecution. It is a likable place and its proximity to London, a mere 21 miles away, has not yet taken off the edge of its essential provinciality.

I can imagine no ramble more pleasant than that which shall bring you, let us say, on some thymy morning in May, when the pink horse chestnuts, which are here a feature, are in bloom, when the air is scented and moist with recent showers and suppressed heat, and a blue haze settles over the landscape, into St. Michaels, an old English village, untouched by any modern developments, save for the injudicious restoration of the church, when Lord Grimthorpe, that devastating amateur architect who spoiled St. Albans cathedral, let loose on it, some twenty-three years ago.

At the entrance to the village you see the little River Ver crossing the road by a ford or waterfall, still in use when a carter wishes to cool his horses' feet; although for the general convenience, a little red brick bridge was built more than a hundred years ago.

St. Michael's Church, standing as it does almost in the centre of the old Roman city of Verulamium, is largely built of Roman brick and tile, the spoils of that vanished place, whose fragmentary walls are now lonely in the meadows. The chief interest of the interior is the curious statue of Bacon, in an alcove on the north side of the chancel. It represents him in his habit as he lived, seated in a chair, in an attitude of philosophical abstraction. "Sir meditat," says the inscription beneath, showing us that the work indeed was intended for an intimate, rather than a conventional portraiture. It was placed here as a mark of affection, by his secretary, Sir Thomas Meautys.

There is a right of way for pedestrians through the park of Gorhambury, now a property of the Grimston family, whose head is the Earl of Verulam. The existing mansion is a typical classic building of the eighteenth century, with an imposing portico of lofty Ionic columns. Bacon's old home is equally typical of its age, the Eliabethan Renaissance period. The scene of the great Chancellor's pride, and of his retirement, has long been a ruin. That he was housed sufficiently well we can yet see from the best preserved feature, the porch, with its now forlorn panels of marble and its terra-cotta medallion heads of the Roman Emperors. The ruins are stayed up now with brickwork and iron rods.

Apart from the crumbling walls stands a poor old, badly weather-beaten, cowled and headless statue, said to represent Henry VIII., but scarce recognisable so scored and slashed is it with pocket-knife initials, the names of many generations of Toms, and Dicks, and Harrys; evidences these, of that love of carving which the passing has remembered, but not exactly to be admired in this manifestation of it. Let us not, however, in accusing the Cockney crowd, forget that they are not alone in scribbling and carving their names and initials everywhere and anywhere. Isaak Walton carved a great "I. W." in the marble of Casaubon's monument in Westminster Abbey, where it may be seen to this day; and is not the name of Carlyle, who should, philosophically, have been far above such a deed, found scribbled on the walls of Shakespeare's birthplace, among those of an undistinguished throng, in whose excuse we can say only that "they knew no better."

To-day the haggard ruins of old Gorhanbury are securely railed off, and the pencils and penknives cannot get to work upon them.—Christian Science Monitor.

Before Columbus and Tasman.

When we are asked to state who discovered America, we reply "Columbus," without any regard for the fact that civilisation had risen and fallen on the American continent before Columbus was born. In New Zealand recently, a boy was asked in a school examination who discovered his country. The answer expected of him by scholastic tradition was "Tasman," but the lad perplexed his teacher by replying, "Kupe." He may not have got his marks, but he was right. Polynesian tradition, which is unwritten history of proved accuracy, records that about a thousand years ago two dark-skinned captains sailed from the Society Islands into the southern sea, discovered New Zealand, sailed round it and returned to their own land, visiting the Island of Rarotonga on their way. The story that has lived after them shows that they entered Wellington Harbor, the present site of the capital city of the Dominion, when they saw there, on the giant wingless bird that had become extinct before the first white man set foot on New Zealand's shores. The world has never produced greater navigators than the early Polynesians, who in their big outrigger canoes traversed the Pacific north and south, east and west. Without map or compass, they pushed forth to the equator and south to the ice pack. The white explorer came in the tracks of their canoes.

Lady Shopkeeper.

The latest titled shopkeeper is to be Lady Bingham, wife of Maj.-Gen. the Hon. Sir Cecil Bingham, who will, Exile learns, open a hat shop in the west end of London. She is sister-in-law of the Earl of Lucan and the Duchess of Abercorn. She was formerly Mrs. Chauncey, and is one of the many beautiful American women in English society.

Echo of Glory.

"Why do they put on so many airs these days?"

"They got that way by having a second lieutenant in the family. And despite the fact that he has been mustered out and has resumed his job as shipping clerk in a sardine factory, they can't forget how he looked in his uniform."

Don't Know Amount.

Sir George Foster stated in the House of Commons recently that no amount had been ascertained of what was due to Canada by way of war expenditure from Germany.

UNVEILING ON DOMINION DAY, JULY 1ST

WAR MEMORIAL MONUMENT

Erected for the County of Lennox & Addington in front of Court House, Napanee, as shown by above sketch. The design is entirely original and will not be duplicated in Canada. Resting on the Union Jack, carved on the four stones at the base, as it mounts up it bears the names of 156 men from this County who are not coming back. The great sacrifice that they made in giving us Victory and Peace is represented in sheathed swords supporting the altar and the maple leaves. The monument is built of genuine Barre Vermont Granite, known as the "rock of ages." On the altar supported by the sheathed swords and the laurel leaves, the tribute to the victorious is all bronze. On the four stones at the base, the Union Jack carved on the top of them, is put the names of battle fields, Ypres, Mons, Somme, Vimy, Hill 70, Paschendaele, Amiens, Arras, Cambrai. This monument is as interesting at the foundation as at the top On the front of the monument, facing the main road appears these words "Through sacrifice to Victory and Peace 1914-1918." On the base of it is put the words "Their name liveth forever more." The words of dedication also appear on this face, viz: "Erected to perpetuate the memory of those from this County of Lennox & Addington who fell in the Great War" On east, west and north sides appear the same words except the dedication. The lettering is driven in deep enough so that their own shadow makes them stand out. There are no impurities such as lead or paint used on this memorial. The foundation is 5 feet in the ground the exact size of the stone, built of concrete. At the extreme points the monument measurse 24 by 24 feet and then above the grass mound it measures 8 feet.6 inches by 8 feet 6 inches and the main stone measures 5 feet 6 inches by 5 feet 6 inches. The total height from the ground or base line to the top of the altar is 14 feet 6 inches. The whole of this monument is hand finished, grass terraced, and everything ready for unveiling on July 1st. It is surrounded by a simple flower bed and walks leading to the Court House will be placed on each side of it. Further particulars of the ceremony of unveiling will appear next week.

Horsemen of Australia

Pay Unique Compliment To the Prince of Wales

THE news that during his forthcoming tour in Australia the Prince of Wales will ride Bayard, a blood bay of over fifteen hands, acknowledged to be the champion hack of the Commonwealth, is full of meaning for one who knows the great island-continent and its people, says London Answers.

From the Australian point of view, no greater compliment could have been paid the prince. More than anywhere else the countrybred Australian loves his horse. There is no people more skilled in horse-lore. Horse-racing is a national passion. A great racehorse becomes almost an object of veneration. In lonely places, hundreds of miles away from the great centres of population, men argue about his achievements, and carefully treasure tattered fragments of newspapers setting forth his exploits.

On the basis of comparative population, there are more verse-writers in Australia than in any other country. And ninety per cent. of their verses are written about the horse. There is at least one Australian horse-poet—A.B. ("Banjo") Paterson—whose verses are known by heart from one end of the continent to the other. The circulation achieved by his books, at 6s. a copy, would turn the most successful of our British masters of poetry green with envy.

Every country-born Australian is a horsemen almost from his birth. It is no exaggeration to say that most of them learn to ride soon after they have acquired the art of toddling. At eight years of age many of them ride as many miles to school and back again every day. (And sometimes, both before and after school, they will milk half-a-dozen cows, and do other odd jobs about the farm.)

At seventeen, or thereabouts, the Australian lad becomes the proud possessor of a horse of his own—"a real showy hack," instead of the pony or the old farm general utility horse of which he has made use hitherto. On this he will ride long miles cross country in the evening to visit the girl of his heart upon a distant farm.

If it has "a turn of speed," he will spend hours each day in training it, in the hope of being able to win a race with it at the annual picnic races in the nearest town. Or if it can jump a bit, he will develop its natural talent by "schooling" it over post-and-rail fences or improvised hurdles. The writer knew one young Australian who erected a hurdle under a tree with an overhanging bough so low that if the horse cleared the hurdle, the rider had a very narrow escape from having his head cracked by the tree-limb. He said it made it "so much more exciting."

Another young man lived twenty miles from a country town, to which he would frequently ride in at night on more or less half-broken horses. He would dance until two or three o'clock in the morning, and then ride home. And if it happened to be moonlight, he would not bother to open any of the many gates on his journey, preferring to make his half-schooled horse jump the barbed wire fences instead: That was exciting, too.

Wonderful friendships sometimes exist between these men and their horses. One writer came once to a desolate sheep-station (ranch) in a far-distant part of Australia, where his hostess told me that her husband had died there before a bush-fire had fight a devastating bush-fire which had broken out on the property of a neighbor. She had become anxious at his prolonged absence, and were sending out a search-party to look for him. The writer joined it. Twelve miles away from his homestead he was found lying in a pool of his own blood, with his faithful horse standing guard over him. Exhausted by his efforts to fight the fire, he had gone to sleep on the horse's back on his way home, fallen off, and cracked his skull on a big stone. But the horse had never moved from his side.

So that is why it is safe to say that the decision to place the champion horse Bayard at the disposal of the Prince of Wales is a great compliment. The Australian will lend his horse only to a man whom he respects. He will allow no duffer to put his leg across its back. The man to whom he lends him must have the "hands" and "seat" of the born horseman. Evidently the "Digger" is convinced that the prince satisfies all these requirements.

Captain Speaks for Canada.

James Morley, a captain in the Canadian infantry, writes as follows from Hoboken, N.Y., to the Hudson Observer:

To those opponents to the League of Nations who are constantly bringing to everyone's attention the fact that under Article X of this League the United States will be far less represented than Great Britain in the number of votes, it seems it never occurs that Canada, Australia and India, who all did valiant work in the late war and made terrible sacrifices, much more so than the United States, are entitled to full recognition and representation in the Warsaw, and are fully and entirely entitled to one vote apiece, just the same as the United States. The United States by insisting on Great Britain having only one vote would be showing the most gross discourtesy towards their Canadian friends and also toward Australia and India who are just as much entitled to recognition as we are. Let those opponents of Article X look at the matter in a fair and open-minded spirit and place themselves in the position of the above dominions, after which it is probable that a new light will dawn upon their now beclouded brains. Let these agitators, instead of reading William Randolph Hearts' "editorials" in his yellow journal, look up the casualty and war records of the above countries and ponder on the thought as to whether they are really living up to the American idea of "fair play."

Canada's Tire Production.

Figures made public in Montreal show that there were about 2,000,000 automobile tires manufactured in Canada last year, requiring about 20,000,000 square yards, or 12,000,000 to 16,000,000 pounds of tire fabric, and that only about one-third of the fabric required in the manufacture of these tires was made in Canada. The remainder came from the United States. Increased production of tire fabric is now aimed at.

And He Still Talked On.

The preacher's evening discourse was dry and long, and the congregation gradually nodded away. The verger tip-toed up to the pulpit and slipped a note under one corner of the Bible. It read: "When you have finished will you please turn off the lights, lock the door and put the key under the mat?"

Advertising!

THE biggest men in the country have found that the easiest way to spell success is to A-D-V-E-R-T-I-S-E. Suppose the newspaper did not publish the news, how would the people know what is happening? If you don't publish the Store News how will the people know about your goods? You can never sell the goods people do not know you have.

Advertising is telling about your stock. The firm that advertises gets ahead, every time, of the firm that does not advertise. Shop-worn and out-of-date stock is the penalty merchants pay for not advertising.

THIS WOMAN'S MISERY

Ended by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Remarkable Recovery of Mrs. Church.

Smiths Falls, Ont.—"I suffered with falling of my organs, pains around my heart and in bowels and down my legs, neuralgia in my face and head, and that terrible sinking feeling. I felt that I could not live and would fix my house in order every night so you would be no trouble if I dropped off in the night. My husband went to the druggist to get the best remedy he had and he gave him Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took six bottles and felt a lot better. I will always recommend the Vegetable Compound, and you can use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. J. O. CHURCH, Box 845, Smiths Falls, Ont.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from nervous prostration, displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion and dizziness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.

If there are any complications about which you desire advice write in confidence to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

What British Commission Says About Canada.

The only kind of immigrant that is of any value to a country, especially a new country, is the immigrant who "comes out" fully understanding what he must expect. The weak point in many immigration efforts, in the past, has been that quantity rather than quality was the first consideration. A disappointed, disillusioned immigrant is of no use to any country. It is for this reason, amongst many others, that the report, recently published, of the commission sent out to Canada, last year, by the British Government, to inquire into the openings for women in the Dominion, is so specially useful.

The commissioners have done their work well. They have stated the facts just as they are, and, whilst there is no attempt to produce a discouraging picture, there is also no attempt to produce an unduly roseate one. The commissioners were well aware that the work which Canada has to offer to women is, of course, just the kind of work which will appeal to certain women, and that those women will reap a success of it. They saw, in fact, that the only way to induce the right woman to undertake the work, and to ensure that the work was well done by so doing so, was to tell the truth about the situation. Thus, in dealing with the question of domestic service, the commissioners point out that greater friendliness is to be found in Canadian homes, and opportunities are better for social intercourse alike. But they do not hesitate to warn prospective immigrants that Canada, like England, has the objectionable living device that it is often held out to be; that the work in domestic service is hard and, especially in the country, often very isolated. The wages, however, are good; freedom of individual action considerable; whilst life in the country offers much the same attractions and opportunities to all, no matter what particular part of the work they may be engaged upon.

The report deals with the same frankness with the teaching profession. Enlightened women teachers are needed, especially in foreign communities. The work is hard in isolated districts, but progress is assured to those courageous enough to take up these teaching posts, whilst there are, the report insists, great attractions in such a life. Then again, the woman agriculturist is warned but not discouraged. She is told about the rigorous winters during which little or no cultivation is carried on, in many parts of Canada; she is warned that she must expect strenuous work; and she is shown the desirability of three or four women joining together in any agricultural enterprise, if they want to make a success of it.

Perhaps the chief service performed by the report, however, is the decided way in which it condemns the bonus system in immigration. Under this system the shipping agent is paid a bonus on every immigrant secured through his agency. In order, therefore, to secure as many emigrants as possible, the agent undertakes to pay practically the whole of a girl's expenses from England to her destination in Canada, requiring the girl, however, to sign a bond agreeing to make repayment by instalments out of her wages. This bond is frequently taken over by the girl's employer, who thus secures a hold upon her which, until the obligation is discharged, practically reduces the girl to the status of an indentured laborer. The report is most emphatic in the matter. Practically every experienced authority consulted in Canada," it declares, "agrees in expressing the opinion that the system of capitation bonus paid to an agent for inducing an emigrant to land in the Dominions is a mistake, and has been the source of much evil."

Irish Names.

It has often been said that were a Dublin jarvey given the Irish names of a street and asked to drive his fare at once to it, he would find himself in a veritable quandary. This in spite of the fact that all the Dublin streets at one time had their Irish as well as their English names posted up. Thurles is the latest Hibernian town to give its jarveys a bad quarter of an hour with the dual forms. The simple main street has blossomed out into Cearnog na Saorise, South Mall has become the formidable Plas Chiomhanaigh, while Nicholas street is the fearful and wonderful Bothar Chuchulainn! One is reminded of the New England lake which bears the sonorous Indian cognomen of Charggoggagoggmanchoggagogg chaubunagungamaug, or something to that effect. One thing certain about that lake is that it is never called by its Indian name. Thurles please note!

Big Circus Coming.

Lovers of the out-of-the-ordinary amusement will be interested in the announcement that Howe's Great London Circus have returned from a triumphal tour abroad and will be seen in Napanee, afternoon and evening, June 7th, presenting decidedly the largest and greatest program of original, unique and thrilling feature acts known to-day in the show world. This vast tented amusement enterprise is alone in a class by itself without a rival. Nothing like the imperial performance provided by Howe's Great London Shows was ever before dreamed or dared by the boldest managers. Whatever your preference, you will find plenty to interest, astonish and edify you. There are thrilling aerial act, during every moment of which one expects to see the intrepid performers hurled into eternity ; artistic and sensational equestrianism ; incredibale and bewildering athletic and acrobatic numbers ; blood-chilling jockey hurdle and chariot races amazingly venturesome bicylists ; phenomenal exhibition by three wild beasts. In fact so numerous and varied are the novelties offered in the three rings, upon the two elevated stages and upon the triple length hippo-drome track by these shows, lack of space will not permit each to be mentioned. The quantity and quality of the features are such as to really stagger comprehension. It matters not how big the Howe's Great London Shows may have been in years gone by, this season they completely overwhelm all past efforts. The wonderful growth they have attained since their inception is due solely to the fact that the proprietors have always aimed to present all and more than they advertised and everything of the best as well as the best of everything. Success has crowned their efforts from the first and to-day they are justly recognized as the invincible monarchs of the amusement world.

Here are four good verses, to help us keep cheerful, through these busy days : "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest ; Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly in heart ; And ye shall find rest unto your souls, for My yoke is easy, and My burden is light."—Mat. 11 : 28-29-30 ; "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might"—Eph. 6-10."

Death of Sister Mary Stella.

On Friday, the 21st instant, the Angel of Death visited the House of Providence, calling to her reward a devoted, promising young religious in the person of Sister Mary Stella. The deceased sister was stricken with influenza in January last while teaching in the Separate school of Arnprior. She came to the Mother House, Kingston, for a rest and to receive treatment, on February 17th. For some time hope was entertained that she would regain her former robust health, and be able to resume her duties, but the dampness of the past season was not in her favor. When no longer able to go out in the open air she began to decline, and for the last few weeks it became apparent that her earthly pilgrimage was about to close. She passed away peacefully at 8 a.m., surrounded by the sorrowing members of her community. Sister M. Stella was the daughter of the late Daniel Kennedy, Enterprise. In March, 1908, she entered the Community of the Sisters of Providence. After her profession in the Order she attended the Normal school, Ottawa, obtaining a second class certificate in April, 1915. From that time until her illness she was employed in teaching, having successfully taught in the Separate schools of Glen Nevis, Trenton, Belleville, Perth, and lastly in Arnprior. Being of a sweet disposition, she was beloved by her pupils, as well as by all with whom she came in contact. Besides her mother, she is survived by one brother and three sisters : Vincent and Loretta, at home ; Birdie, a professional nurse in New York ; and Mrs. John Hinch, Enterprise. The funeral took place from the Church of Our Mother of Sorrows.

MRS. F. F. MILLER HONORED

The Red Cross Executive was asked for afternoon tea to the home of Mrs. Herb. Daly, Tuesday of last week. There were many expressions of delight at the complete recovery of a beloved member, Mrs. Geo. Hawley, whose critical illness cast a gloom over the whole town. Some time was spent in discussing plans for the future work of the society, special mention being made of the proposed Membership-Campaign of the Canadian Red Cross, in October.

Mrs. Grange, the President, then called upon Mrs. F. F. Miller presenting her with a platinum pin, on behalf of the Red Cross Society, as a slight appreciation of her faithful and efficient patriotic work. Mrs. Miller was taken completely by surprise, but made a most appropriate reply in her usual charming manner, assuring the members that any success in her work was due to the cheerful co-operation of all Red Cross workers.

Delicious refreshments were served after which the ladies departed carrying with them pleasant recollections of the occasion.

THE ADDRESS :

Napanee, May 18th, 1920.

Dear Mrs. Miller,

When the great war cloud burst upon the world in the midsummer of 1914, you were among the first to foresee the need of making suitable provision for alleviating the suffering that must necessarily result from the meeting of the hostile forces. You lost no time in summoning a few of your friends to consider the best course to be adopted in perfecting an organization that would best serve the purpose, and in due course a charter was issued for the Napanee Red Cross Society.

As First Vice-President you have faithfully performed the duties of your office and cheerfully aided in every way that lay within your power every good work undertaken by the society. While you were surrounded by a band of willing workers who achieved wonderful results during the five years of that bitter and sorrowful struggle, yet we fully realize that yours was a guiding hand and by your untiring efforts and splendid example you were a source of encouragement and inspiration to us all. We also recognize that entirely apart from your work in the society you were most unremitting in your personal attention to the needs of our soldiers overseas, and contributed most generously towards their comfort and pleasure. Nor was your society work limited to the time given to the Napanee branch, but several other branches throughout the county received timely instructions and assistance from you.

We therefore deem it fitting that we should place on record our appreciation of your services and we ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held by your fellow workers.

Signed on behalf of the Society,

Annabella Grange, President.
Ella Wagar, 1st Vice-Pres.
Margaret Perry, 3rd Vice-Pres.
Isabel Daly, Treasurer.
Sarah Thompson, Secretary.

EDUCATION THROUGH I.O.D.E. WAR MEMORIAL FUND

For a period of several weeks past short articles have appealed in our local papers, through the kindness and patriotic spirit of the editors, explanatory of the various phases into which the great concerted movement of the I.O.D.E. for a suitable war memorial to our glorious dead and totally disabled men of all services, has been divided.

It is earnestly hoped that in this manner the attention and interest of numberless citizens has been drawn to this most worthy undertaking, and that thereby a thorough understanding of the scheme has been made clear to every reader. You are therefore asked to lend your warmest support to this patriotic effort to benefit soldiers' and sailors' orphans.

In view of this fact, open your hearts and your purses, and give as generously as possible to help an objective of $500,000, and be happy in the thought that you participated in the erection of a NEW KIND WHICH WILL DEFY BEYOND ALL OTHERS, THE RAVAGES OF TIME. The Local Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire are putting on a dramatic entertainment, under the able direction of Mr. H. Bird, on the 10th and 11th June, to assist in raising funds for the above memorial, and it is confidently hoped that every citizen of the town and county, wherever possible, will give the performance their unqualified support, both financially and in attendance.

ODE No. 2 TO THE BOYS

Well boys here is something for you
And, I'm sure you'll admit that it is all true
Your knocks, blows and bluffs we girls have received
But listen young men, you'll not be deceived
You'd like every girl to be A-1 and true
But why don't you try being so to We could try from now until set of sun
Still we wouldn't be able to please every one.

I stroll down the street
And I stand out of sight
What's that I now see
Why the boys who claim to be "oh so polite"
There's tall ones and short ones, and some just like you
Talking of this girl and that girl
Pasing remarks for that is all you do
Now 'tes up young man, Isn't that true ?

All of a sudden they all turn around
What's the cause ? why a new girl has just struck the town
One boy starts up but it isn't so long
Before all of the gang is whistling or humming a song
And mind you, young man, she is just one of those
Who finds some occasion to powder her nose
She's painted, powdered, and her nose is so white
Still she is the one you will watch 'till a way out of sight.

The hub-bub begins and they all now will talk
"Oh wasn't she sweet, and such a dear little walk"
That kind of a girl, boys, it seems is what you want to possess
Still you can see she isn't half dressed
She's powdered, she's painted, all dolled up you know
And her face is so white and her dress is so low
Oh boy I know it is not for me to say
But I can very well tell you, you're the one that will pay.

Next comes the plain, little unpowdered lass
"Oh where shall I go ! which way shall I pass"
She sees all those boys with their impudent stare
My nose isn't white and the clothes that I wear
Are perfectly modest and plain as can be
And "those" boys can very well see
My scarf is made of wool and so are my hose
And my face isn't painted, or I haven't a white nose.

Now boys you can see the way we all feel
We think there are jobs more inviting that to you should appeal
Than to stand on the corners and pass your remarks
Of the tall girls, the short girls, or the ones in the park
So take my advice young man and don't be too gay
For the right or wrong cue
Is coming your way
And when she does come she is coming to stay.

Your choice make wisely and by it abide
Two girls I will give you, choose one for your bride
One painted like Jezebel with many bleached locks
Derelicts of society, of conspicuous frocks
The other plain, and untarnished, natural flush
Tinting her cheek with a soft peachy blush
With manner so open, her intentions so pure
If her heart you once capture a happy future is sure.

Well boys my time is up and I must go
For it is getting late and lights are low
I know you are saying, why girl how is this ?
You say we boys are knocking just the opposite miss
'Tis true young man in your verses you say
You prefer the girls who are not dressed too gay
Why is it then when you go to the shows
The one you always take is the girl with the powdered up-nose.

You wonder why as you look at the girl
With the unpainted face and unpowdered nose
With a smile on her face where ever she goes
The reason is this if she was married to you
She would be crying, "come back, come back to me do"
But no, you have given your all to be close
To the girl who is painted and powdered up nose
So beware young man when this you see
And not have to say, "why this is just like me."

Some Blow!

Following a fight at Llanbradach, near Cardiff, John Charles Herbert, 17, a collier, has been arrested on a charge of causing the death of Edward Jesse Payne, 16, also a collier. The lads are said to have disagreed, and decided to have a fight. They went to a field, each accompanied by seconds and a small band of supporters. The fight had lasted about six minutes when Payne, it is said, received a blow under the heart. He fell and died almost immediately.

Oriental English.

The English in the following speech quoted by the Writer from an unnamed Oriental paper, would seem to do more than halt: "The news of English we tell the latest. Writ in perfectly style and most earliest. Do a murder commit, he hear it and tell it. Do a mighty thief die, we publish it and in borders somber. Staff has each one been colleged and write like the Kipling and the Dickens. We circle every town and exortionate not for advertisements."

SHE HAD SUFFERED FOR ELEVEN YEARS

Only Weighed 100 Pounds—Elijah Mitchell Praises Tanlac For Restoring Wife's Health

"As long as I live I will praise Tanlac for what it has done for my wife," said Elijah Mitchell, Oyster Pond, Jeddore, Halifax County, Nova Scotia, Canada, recently. Continuing Mr. Mitchell said :

"For the past eleven years my wife has been in extremely poor health. Everything she ate disagreed with her and she suffered terribly with indigestion. She would bloat badly with gas after every meal and complained of a heavy feeling just like her food had formed into a lump, and she would have the worst sort of cramping pains. She was bothered with constipation so bad she had always to be taking some sort of laxative and at times suffered with intense headaches. She was so nervous the least little noise out of the ordinary would completely upset her and she would tremble all over and become weak after the least little excitement, and was so restless at night she could get but little sleep. She had fallen off from 140 to 100 pounds and was in such a weak condition and so badly run down she was as near a physical wreck as any one ever gets to be and live and at one time was confined to her bed for four months.

"She had taken many different medicines, but none of them seemed to do her a particle of good. Well, I had been reading so much in the Halifax newspapers of the good Tanlac was doing others that I got her some, and while she has only taken two bottles it is simply remarkable how it has built her up.

"She is gaining in weight and strength every day and looks like a different person, and she says she feels better in every way than she has in years. She can eat anything she wants and never suffer any bad after effects, for her nerver are getting in fine condition and she can sleep in peace-ful as a child all night long. She never complains of a pain of any kind any more and has not had a headache since taking Tanlac. I was badly worried over her condition, and I can not tell you how thankful we both are for the good Tanlac has done her."

Tanlac is sold in Napane at WALLACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. FOSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON.

NEW BOOKS AT LIBRARY

A large consignment of the latest publications has just been placed in the library. There are books to suit all tastes and ages. The reader of fiction will find all the latest novels, and the wants of the young people have not been overlooked. In the non-fiction class the following may be particularly noted :

Ludendorff's OWN STORY and MY MEMOIRS by Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz. These two famous German leaders have each produced two large volumes since the armistice was signed. Of course, they write from the German view point, but are unsparing in their criticisms of their own countrymen, and do not hesitate to recognize the merits of their enemies.

The other side of the story is given in MEMORIES by Lord Fisher and RECORDS by Lord Fisher. These two books should be read in conjunction with the above mentioned volumes of the German authors.

CANADA'S HUNDRED DAYS by J. F. B. Livessay. The author claims and professes to prove that during the last hundred days of the war the work of the Canadian Corps contributed more than any other combined operation to the final downfall of the enemy arms.

TANKS tell all about this new arm of the service and the work accomplished by it.

SPIRITUAL VOICES IN MODERN LITERATURE exhibits in unusual measure a sympathetic insight into human nature and its spiritual problems, and a finely discriminating appreciation of literary values.

A YEAR AS A GOVERNMENT AGENT, by Mrs. Norman Whitehouse. Mrs. Whitehouse undertook the task of getting the truth about America into Germany. She was hampered by politicians and red tape, but triumphed over them all. Her book is well worth a perusal.

DEMOCRACY AND GOVERNMENT—a study of the principles on which a democratic government must be based in order to secure the two essentials of such a government-responsibility and efficiency.

SIBERIA OF TO-DAY, by an American newspaper man who was with the United States expeditionary force to Siberia. An amusing and amazing book.

THRILLING DEEDS OF BRITISH AIRMEN. There is adventure here a-plenty, and also much useful information.

THE POLITICAL FUTURE OF INDIA, by Lajpua Raj. The author is an educated native and tells of the aspirations of his countrymen, and advances some very good reasons why some greater measure of self government should be given to his fellow countrymen.

POLAND: THE UNKNOWN portrays the long and once glorious history of Poland of which so little is known in modern times.

A LABRADOR DOCTOR—an open air autobiography by Wilfred Thomason Grenfell, the story of the great life work with the fishermen of of Labrador and Newfoundland.

Essence of smoke for meat is handier and quicker than the old way. It preserves, too. 35c. and $1.00 bottles at WALLACE'S Drug Store.

CALVERT IS OLDEST ACTRESS.

Records of Ladies Who Helped to Make History on the Stage.

The veteran actress, Miss Dolores Drummond, who celebrated her eighty-second birthday in London recently, is not the oldest living actress. That distinction appears to belong either to Mrs. Charles Calvert or Miss Genevieve Ward, each of whom was born in 1837, and is in her eighty-third year. Miss Ward was born in March, but January is understood to be Mrs. Calvert's natal month.

Mrs. Calvert is probably the Mother of the stage in age and Mrs. Kendal in length of service. It is pertinent to remember, in this connection, that Mrs. Kendal has often been styled the "Queen of the Drama."

	Born.	Debut stage	Years on the
Mrs. Calvert	1837	1843	48

William IV. was on the throne in the year of Miss Dolores Drummond's birth. Miss Drummond paged with G. V. Brooke, Charl Kean, Barry Sullivan, Joseph Jeffe son, Edwin Booth, and Henry Irving. "She knew Kean intimately," she says, "and played Portia in Shylock's costume."

Why Man First Searched for Gold.

The story of what the Lancet (London, Eng.) calls "an ethnological discovery of revolutionary import" was told by Prof. G. Elliot Smith in a lecture at the Royal Institution recently. Briefly, this was of a pre-historic race of homeless men whose remains have been found in Europe, Asia, Africa, America and the islands of the Pacific.

The strangest fact about this is that wherever this race of wanderers left traces of its culture there might also be found natural deposits of gold. This race of gold-seekers flourished before the earliest pyramids were built; about 2500 B.C. they were digging gold in Turkestan and Persia. They were allured to the American side of the Pacific by pearl beds.

Prof. Smith went on to tell how gold came to acquire so great an influence in the world. The earliest evidence of its use comes from Egypt and dates from about 4000 B.C. In those days, however, gold was not money; it was not used in coinage, it was not a precious metal in the sense of making its possessor wealthy.

The ancient Egyptian symbol for gold is a conventional girdle of cowries. It was endowed in their belief with the virtue of vitality. It increased fertility, preserved youth and was given to those who died in the belief that death was the result of diminished rather than absent vitality, and that with this additional source of vigor the dead might carry on some sort of life beyond the grave. After a time the demand for cowries must have exceeded the supply, for models were made in imitation of the real shells from the clay of the river bed. Then gold, also found in the river beds, was used to make model cowries. The beauty and lustre must have confirmed their beliefs, till presently the substance rather than the form acquired a magical significance."

The IMPOSTOR

"Look here now!" Laynton's voice became modulated and unctuously smooth. "You ain't doing yourself any good by playing the fool this way. You come on out of there, give us the information we want, and we'll forget about this, for all that two of my chaps have got bullets through their shoulders."

"What's the ship's position?" inquired Wallen coolly.

There was a quick oath from Captain Laynton. "I guess you know blamed well!" he growled. "Answer!"

"We've Arru abeam, haven't we?" persisted Wallen quietly.

"Yes."

"Well," said Wallen slowly, "I'll tell you what you want to know—on one condition."

"Aha! So you do know, eh?" snarled Laynton. "I thought we'd get it out of you before we were through. You're beginning to show some signs of sense, my lad. What's the condition?"

"It's simple enough," Wallen replied shortly. "You'll stand in close to Arru opposite MacKnight's station—and let Miss MacKay and Gunga here go ashore."

"I, sahib—no!" Gunga had slipped quickly to Wallen's side and was clutching at Wallen's sleeve. "I will not go, sahib. If the sahib gives his life for the Miss MacKay, shall the shame come upon me that I let the sahib die alone?"

"Quiet, Gunga!" Wallen commanded softly. "I cannot hear what the captain says." Then raising his voice: "What did you say, captain?"

"I said you mean you'd kiffd of count on going along with them after loading us up to the eyes with some fake dope," Laynton flung back sarcastically. "Well, you can forget it. You'll never get away from this ship like that."

"I don't expect to get away," said Wallen simply. "They are to go. When they are safe I'll tell you everything you want to know. If what I tell you proves to be a lie—I am still aboard."

"Well, that's fair," admitted Layton. "I'll take you up on that, and—"

His words were lost in a sudden furious altercation in which Wallen could distinguish Mott's voice. Then came a bellow from the captain:

"You close your jaw! What's the girl compared to the other?"

Almost a smile was on Wallen's lips —a smile that was curiously like a prayer. It was his last card, and he had played it, and it was the master trump.

Gunga, in low, passionate words, was still pleading with him. Captain Layton shouted down the companionway again:

"I'll take you up on that. We'll stand in now and I'll send them ashore in a boat."

"No," continued Wallen coldly; "you'll send a boat ashore and ask MacKnight to come out here in a prau. There's a slight difference, as I said I wanted to see them safe, not rowed around the ship and put aboard again on the other side."

"Well, have it your own way," laughed Layton unpleasantly. "I'm agreeable, and that goes. Well—"

It seemed to come from the port quarter—a muffled boom that rolled and reverberated over the water. And then another, and still another. And then a wild shout from the deck.

Wallen glanced quickly about him. For the first time he noticed that Helen MacKay's door was slightly opened, and now stood ajar. Gunga rushed into the stateroom next to hers.

Came that dull, distant boom again; then a crash, a ripping, tearing, rending of wood and steel, and the Monleigh heeled to the shock.

Then Gunga called:

"Sahib, it is too late! I see the flash of guns. He will come from behind one of the islands. It is Ram Gulab Singh."

CHAPTER IX.

The Man With One Finger.

Wallen walked quietly across the saloon to his own cabin. A strange, unnatural calm seemed to have fallen upon him with Gunga's words. Too late!

He could not in justice reproach himself. There had been only one chance and he had taken it—MacKnight's. Even if he had defied Layton and his sordid crew hours earlier, the result would have been the same—it would have brought neither the land nor MacKnight's the sooner.

It was only that Ram Gulab Singh had come first.

He took his reserve supply of ammunition from its hiding place, stowed half the boxes away in his pockets, with the balance of the cartridges in his hand, returned to the saloon and gave them to Gunga, motioning the other to remove the barricade.

"What are you going to do?" She had come out from her stateroom and was standing now, a straight, resolute little figure, with eyes that were very wide as they fixed on him.

The electric bulb in the saloon dimmed down and went out. The boom of the heavy gun came across the water again, and unconsciously for a tense instant Wallen waited, expectant of the shock if the shell should find its mark. It missed.

"I'm going on deck," he answered quietly. "They'll be too busy to notice me, and besides it's dark. Gunga will stay here and replace the barricade after I go out. We've got to know what's going on, Miss MacKay. The ship has been struck once, though not vitally, I think; but down here is no place to be caught in if another shot prove more successful. I will be back presently."

Without giving her a chance to reply he slipped through the door as Gunga opened it and out into the alleyway. It was black, empty, deserted, as he had expected.

He made his way up the companionway to the little lounging room and halted in the port doorway, looking out.

He could see nothing at first. It was very dark—not a light showed on the Monleigh. In that respect Layton, taught no doubt by his experiences in the discreditable and varied trades he had boosted was the Monleigh's business, had been prompt to meet emergencies.

And then gradually, discernible only to a sailor's eye, like a dark blotch on the water, Wallen made out another steamer almost abeam. An instant later, as though in grim indorsement of his vision, from the blotch there leaped a great red flame, came the heavy, resonant roar of the gun's report, and overhead a shell whistled ominously by.

About a mile Wallen now placed the distance between the two vessels, though as to the size of the other he could form no estimate. But did it matter?

He was only conscious of something smoldering dully within him, and that was because Helen MacKay was here. He shook his head a little. Helen MacKay, of course, would never fall into Ram Gulab Singh's hands—alive.

On the bridge he could hear Layton calling down the engine room tube, frantically imploring the engineer for speed; and then Layton's voice was drowned out by a din from forward by the crew.

Wallen, hugging the shadows of the deckhouses, moved forward to a position under the bridge.

Mott was talking excitedly overhead.

"She's coming up hand over hand," it fell to him to hear. "And Morse, tell him that if it's that swine that's masquerading as Wallen he wants, we'll turn him over and—my God!"—with a rip and crash, staggering the ship, a shot from the wireless house to the foremast.

"Quick!" yelled Layton. "Tell him! Tell him. D'ye hear—tell him! He'll have us at the bottom in another five minutes!"

A strange, awed silence held for an instant following the shot; and now over his head, Wallen could distinctly hear the clicking of the Morse set.

He strained his eyes seaward watching for an answering signal, and after a moment it came—but not in Morse. It was the belching flare of the gun again, and again the rend and smash of the projectile as it tore into the Monleigh's hull.

There was no doubt about the range now, nor the tenor of Ram Gulab Sing's answer. It was as Gunga had said—the principle that dead men tell no tales. Ram Gulab Singh's tactics, from Ram Gulab Singh's standpoint, were faultless—that a ship might disappear off the face of the earth and be never heard of again was one thing, but that she or anyone on board her should return to report that she had been attacked in these waters, suspiciously those of Ram Gulab Singh, was quite another!

And then to Wallen came a space of time that he could not estimate, each moment recording some wild, surreal, bewildering, kaleidoscopic change in the scene around him. Again that terrific crash from a striking shell, and then a scream, unearthly, not human, from the very bowels of the ship—a tremor of the vessel from stem to stern, a groaning, screeching, wrenching of mangled machinery, a tottering thud as though the engines had collapsed upon their bedplates, a cloud of steam volleying skyward from the engine room hatch, and there was no more vibration—and the Monleigh lay a helpless thing, with only a sullen movement now from the momentum of a moment gone.

He drew back against the captain's room.

They were rushing down from the bridge, Mott and Larsen, to hurl themselves down the forward ladders from the boat deck to the flush foredeck below, shouting a confusion of orders to the crew as they ran.

Layton, still on the bridge, was alternately bawling into the engine room tube and jamming the engine telegraph hysterically backward and forward. A weird, uncanny chorus of exultant shrieks, as of devils in unholy revel, came from across the water, and the sound was close now.

Wallen swept his hands across his eyes. He could make out the other vessel plainly now, gliding like a shadow down upon them—like a shadow, save when the gun's flame burst through the blackness, angry red.

And now at behind him showed another flame. A curious sight! The steam pouring in immense volumes from the engine room hatch was twisted, as it swirled upward, with darts of yellow and bright red. There was fire below!

A Chinaman, one of the coal passers, naked to the waist, blackened, burned, yelling in torment, demented, appeared suddenly upon the deck, ran by him and leaped headlong from the rail overboard.

The bridge, useless now for navigation, was deserted. Layton rushed down the ladder and into the saloon; the quartermaster, who had been at the wheel, came tumbling after the captain, and, like the mates, swung the forward ladder to the foredeck.

The Monleigh rolled with a sudden, heavy lurch. Wallen moved instantly back along the deck. Was she sinking? He halted at the lounging room door for a final glance.

The steam, pouring from the engine room hatch, was streaked now with deeper yellow, deeper red. And now there came the crackle of small arms from the crew forward—the answer a demoniacal, exultant scream from those aboard, and, it seemed, a thousand tiny flashes as the fire was returned.

They were close alongside now—he heard the swish of the other's screw going astern to stop dead in the water—were preparing to board! Why! Why not stand off and sink the Monleigh?—the Monleigh was probably sinking now. Yes, he knew why. They were afraid that what Mott had suggested might be true—that in the darkness there might escape in a boat.

He laughed suddenly. What was it Gunga had said: "A fight, sahib, that I would to Allah I might see again before I die"? He had answered and prayed to Allah in vain. Gunga would have his fight. They were going to board. God, how they lined the decks and rails out there—they were in their hundreds!

It was light now, like the play of lightning with the volleying of the small-arms. Aye, Gunga would have his fight! He laughed again wildly—and then terror came.

It seemed to engulf his soul with horror, unnerving him, unmanning him for an instant. What of her! And then Wallen's face drew into set, rigid lines, and there came into his eyes a look that was not good to see—and he turned and dashed below.

"Open, Gunga, quick!" he shouted. And as the door swung back: "Miss MacKay—both of you—this way!"

They ran out to meet him, and he caught her suddenly, steadying her as there came a violent shock—and with the shock a hideous, louder outburst of yelling.

It was Ram Gulab Singh alongside! Half carrying her, half guiding her, Wallen, with Gunga behind, gained the top of the companionway, ran out onto the deck through the starboard door of the lounging room and, protected on this side by the deckhouses, rushed forward toward the bridge.

It was a last stand; that was all—ultimately the same as though they had remained below, except that here they could die fighting and not as rats in a trap.

He and Gunga could hold the bridge ladders until the Monleigh went down, or until at least every other part of the ship was in the hands of Ram Gulab Singh; and the charthouse would serve as a protection for her until—until—his brain went sick again with fear at thought of her—and it did not seem to be his voice that was shouting so reassuringly over the horrible babel around him.

"Up you go, Miss MacKay! That's it! Splendid! Now into the chartroom!" He pushed her almost forcibly inside—and swung toward Gunga. "Gunga, take the starboard ladder—I'll take the port."

Around him was an inferno; screams, shrieks, yells and cries, the shrill hiss of escaping steam, the sharp crackle of a flame leaping upward through the engineroom hatch, the crash and rattle of small-arm fire filled the air.

Below on the forward deck it was as though hell itself were loosed. The green flaming disc of a vessel lay against the Monleigh's bow, from which, to join scores already there, white-clothed figures, like a horde of ghouls, poured onto the Monleigh's flush deck; and, as a fire-flame shot heavenward, illuminating the scene in daylight brightness, the naked steel of the kris flickered in its downward sweep, and dark, grimacing features showed, and out of the features in a horribly incredible way the eyes glittered. And here and there upon the deck forms law sprawled and prone as they had fallen.

Wallen ripped open a box of cartridges with his thumb nail, and let them tumble loose into his pocket, as he stared over the weather-cloth. What was left of the Monleigh's crew was already driven back on the ladders leading to the boat deck. Ram Gulab Singh was making short work of it—as he must!

With the Monleigh afire, even if the fire were still amidships, it was a precarious thing for that other vessel to lay there alongside! That was Layton and two of the crew on the starboard ladder fighting like demons; and directly below him, on the lower port ladder, were Mott and Larsen and two others—no, there were only Larsen and two of the crew—Mott had ditched downward into the sweep of a kris, seeming most curiously to meet the glint of it in mid air.

Six left!

What was the matter below there now? What was that infuriated, triumphant yell of the Malays, louder than any than had gone before? They were swarming up both ladders! Layton, and Larsen from each side had given way—they were hidden under the bridge now, and he could not see, and—

Gunga's voice rang out: "Sahib, they come!"

In a flash Wallen swung about and dropped down full length on the bridge at the head of the port ladder, shouting to Gunga to do the same. He could understand now the sudden retreat from the low ladders.

The Malays had got aft somehow and were now sweeping along the deck, screaming as they came, to take the Monleigh's men in the rear.

And now the fight raged at the foot of his own ladder. Larsen and one man gained it—and Larsen toppled in a heap. The seaman, battling like a madman, made the first step of the ladder, the second, another—and then a form, leaping from the ruck below, pulled the man backward and crashed down himself beside his victim, as Wallen's revolver streamed fire down the ladderway.

The last of the Monleigh's men was gone!

And then they came howling, screaming, mad with the blood-lust that was upon them, sweeping up the one after another—and one after the other went down before Wallen's fire, and the ladder steps grew cluttered, and Wallen laughed aloud. He could hold that ladder against a thousand of them—against all hell! A madness, a frenzy, was upon him. He laughed again. He could hear Gunga singing in a strange, crooniike way as he fought.

Another rush! He fired, fired once more—and then the hammer only clicked as he pulled the trigger. The magazine was empty!

He snatched at his pocket for cartridges, as the great form of a man, tall and gaunt, with distorted face, swept through the screaming mass below and sprang up the ladder.

There was no time to load—the man was almost at the top, with a dozen followers behind him. Wallen leaped to his feet and with clubbed revolver lunged forward.

"Ram Gulab Singh!" He Cried.

And then suddenly the great white beam of a searchlight from seaward played for an instant over the bridge —and in the white light Wallen looked into the eyes of Ram Gulab Singh—and knew it was Ram Gulab Singh, because the hand that clutched at the ladder's side rope was fingerless, save for the forefinger.

"Ram Gulab Singh!" he cried, and struck with all his might—and missed.

The whir of the other's kris sang in his ear as he flung himself sidewise to avoid the blow.

"You have your father's face, you rat!" the man shrieked, and lifted the blade to swing again.

The white light was gone—searching along the length of the ship. Again Wallen struck in the light of the flames now that were bursting, angry, venomous, with a roar and hiss, from the engineroom hatch, and this time the other reeled back as the blow went home.

But the next instant the man behind Ram Gulab Singh on the ladder reached forward between his leader's legs and jerked Wallen's feet from beneath him. There was a scream of triumph from Ram Gulab Singh; and as Wallen, losing his balance, pitched forward, he caught the flash of the whirling kris coming down upon him.

And then, in the fraction of a second that followed, even as he fell, the brain, stimulated a thousandfold, absorbing details, registered them upon his consciousness.

The blade, within an inch of his head, seemed to fly off into the air as though torn from the other's hands; a revolver roared behind him, the hot breath of it on his face, and Ram Gulab Singh flung up his hands; her voice was calling his name again and again—and then he had smashed his fists full into Ram Gulab Singh.

Mechanically his arms locked around the other; and hurtling downward over the sprawled bodies on the ladder-steps, bowling those behind over like ninepins, Wallen spun, twisting and turning in the air, a dead man clutched in his embrace, and crashed upon the deck, and his arms relaxed, and he lay still.

When he opened his eyes he was in Gunga's arms, and Helen MacKay was binding something about his head; and there was a strange stillness about him—strange because the roar of the flames was stillness where it seemed there should be sobbuts and cries and demoniacal screams and the clash of arms and the shrieks of dying men.

He staggered up to his feet.

Sailors in naval uniform were running about the decks, and a young officer was peering into his face. Wallen tried to place the other, and failed at first, because his head was swimming so dizzily; and then he remembered that it was Lieutenant Damon, of the gunboat York, who had crossed with him once in the Pekamarn.

"A narrow squeak, old chap!" Damon was saying, with a grip on Wallen's hand. "The old York's chasing those devils out there now—hear the guns! We got the whole story from Miss MacKay two days ago. The commander sent me off with a couple of boats' crews in the hope that we'd find some of you alive; and he sent me because I'd know you, Wallen, my boy —if you were really Wallen."

"I—I don't understand," said Wallen weakly.

"No—I dare say not!" Damon laughed cheerily. "And there isn't much time now to explain; we've got to take to the boat. But, in a word Miss MacKay here wirelessed your servant's story to Singapore and asked for help for you, for living a haunted position that she said she had succeeded in getting from the second officer. You had a day's start of us, but you must have been averaging over twelve knots, or we'd have come up sooner."

"They didn't know what to make of that story of Drink-House Sam's murder as your servant told it, but they rounded up the Chinese and Malays that he accused; and had them confessed, implicating the others. That clears you, old man. Here—steady! Don't wabble like that! I'll get a couple of my men to carry you to the boat." He turned away, hurrying along the deck.

Wallen's hand, raised to sweep across his eyes, touched the hand that not so deftly now, a little trembligly now, was still making a pretense at knotting the bandage.

"You—you sent—the story—my story," he said eagerly. "Then—you believed me all the time?"

She shook her head.

"I—I wanted to believe—oh, I want to," she said wistfully. "Only —I—"

And then her head went lower, very close to his, and her cheek brushed his—and it was wet with tears.

"Helen!" he whispered.

"Come on!" called Damon, returning. "We'll have to tumble into the boat. The commander said I was to take you ashore and wait for the York to get back; but there's a fellow out there—a Scotsman—who's come out from shore in a big prau that I passed as we came alongside, and that'll be better than a three-mile pull.

"He can't come alongside, of course —too risky a maneuver with the headway the fire's made aft—but he's waiting for us. In the word I had with him when I told him to stand by, he seemed to know you, Wallen."

And then, as though to corroborate Damon's words, across the water came a hail in a strong, big voice.

"Aboard there!" Wallen! 'Tis Mac-Knight o' Arru, Wallen! Mon, is it well wi' ye?"

And Wallen lifted his head at the cry. He was faint and dizzy, and very weak; but the flames were lighting up those brown, tear-dimmed eyes, and the eyes were smiling into his.

"Yes!" he cried, and his voice rang glad and buoyant out into the darkness, out to MacKnight of Arru. "All's well, MacKnight! All's well!"

Wedding Lasts Three Days.

An invitation to a wedding in Cairo is an important event, because, instead of inviting the guests for a ten-minute church ceremony or a brief reception, the invitation reads three days." There is feasting during all this time, and the house and street are liberally decorated with flags and lanterns.

All On His Own.

Amongst many good stories told by Sir Thomas Lipton, who has challenged for the America Cup next year is one concerning a certain aspiring yachtsman whose appeal to join the exceedingly exclusive Royal Yacht Squadron had been repeatedly rejected.

"Essentially one day, says Sir Thomas, the disgusted candidate put in an appearance at Cowes, flying a pennant showing the legend M.O.B.Y.S.

There were anxious discussions as to what this could represent and at M.O.B.Y.S. the squadron descended sufficiently from its dignity to inquire.

"That," said the owner, "stands for My Own Blooming Yacht Squadron!"

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. OUR FOLK SONGS.

They Are Being Collected and Carefully Edited.

Mr. Leo Smith, editor of the Toronto Conservatory Quarterly Review, in the course of an article on Canadian folk songs in the current issue of that publication, says:

It is not, I think, very generally known that a Canadian branch of the American Folk Lore Society has comparatively recently come into existence. A great deal of European folklore exists in Canada as it does in the United States, and it is the object of this society to place on record this little known heritage of oldworld tradition. We have many distinguished scholars — including M. Marius Barbeau, a Rhodes scholar, of the Geological Survey of Ottawa—who are devoting much time to the furthering of our knowledge of this hitherto rather neglected branch of science. Already something like 3,000 versions of folk-songs have been recorded and transcribed from the Province of Quebec alone, and a number of these were recently published by the American Folk Lore Society in a supplement to one of their regular numbers.

It is a mistake, however, to suppose that the Canadian field of investigation is limited to Quebec. According to M. Barbeau, a great number of traditional sailors' chanties are still to be heard in Newfoundland, in Cape Breton, and in Nova Scotia. Then there are the songs still to be heard in lumber camps, particularly those of the Maritime Provinces, and there are many traditional tunes to be heard around the vicinity of Ottawa. Finally, the Irish and Scottish elements of our population often retain a trace of their musical heritage, and some interesting records of this have been taken recently, the singer being an aged lumberman in the employ of the Hudson Bay Company.

Much work has been done lately in the recording of Indian tunes. The Department of Indian Affairs at Ottawa is displaying a keen interest in securing these permanent records of their music while it is yet time, for it has been noticed that in the case of the Indians, as in other folk-song communities, the art dies when it comes in contact with that of the tutored musician. The younger members, speaking generally of course, have been brought more into contact with such things as brass bands, and then their native music loses its appeal. Of the particular tribes who have furnished the most interesting phonographic records of late, those of British Columbia take precedence.

The yellow-breasted chat is an eccentric bird both when it is singing and in flying. When these birds sing their musical effort seems to require a great deal of flirting of the tail and twisting of the head, and even when they are flying their tail jerks up and down, giving them a strange appearance. The song of this bird is scarcely worthy of the name, having been called a "series of grotesque syllables."

The Time For Kindness.

Better the little deed to-day
Which soothes some heart in sorrow,
Than all the splendid things you may
In kindness do to-morrow.

The roses of his giving.

BLOUSE IN FAVOR

Garment Retains Popularity With Majority of Women.

Vast Array of Materials Including Silks, Laces, Velvet, Metallic Cloth, Chiffon, Crepe.

Much interest is shown in blouses, and never were there more varied and delectable models displayed than those now on view.

Probably this is partly due to the advent of the chemise blouse. Russian blouse, smock, whatever one chooses to call the blouse falling outside the skirt.

These garments to be worn outside the skirt seem to have reacted upon the regulation models, to be tucked inside the skirt, and both are alluring enough to tempt women into extravagant buying.

The vogue of the separate skirt, a by-product of the popularity of the peplum or chemise blouse, works round in a circle to compliment the enthusiasm over the blouse; and so it goes.

There is no end to the different materials used for these blouses—silks, laces, velvet, metallic cloth, chiffon, crepe. Often one sees a blouse of velvet or crepe drawn into a deep girdle of Chinese or Japanese embroidery or metallic cloth.

Another charming blouse is a long model of black Bolivia velvet, opening over a blue and silver waistcoat. The neck is high and fastens with several buttons to the upper part of the opening. There is a girdle of silver inset with imitation sapphires. There are two flounces of the black velvet.

One of the new French designs recently displayed was a straight chemise blouse of bright blue Jersey printed in violet and black. There was a narrow jet girdle, and the edges of the garment were outlined with narrow black silk fringe.

A blouse which would answer admirably for evening wear is of white crepe over green silk. The bodice is made in surplice effect, the right side crossing over to the left, where it is caught by a large flower at the waistline. A hip extender is placed at the sides of the peplum where the silk is joined to a deep band of silver lace which encircles the lower part of the blouse. Silver lace also forms the short sleeves and fills in the V at back and front.

Equally charming is a blouse of pale pink silk. The silk forms the bodice and short sleeves which are cut in one. To the lower part of the bodice are attached two flounces of silver lace—falling in form of cascade at the left side.

MAKE HANDBAG YOURSELF

Black Velvet or an Old Piece of Sealskin, With Beads, Used to Advantage.

Some bags look exactly right with one costume, or perhaps with two, but it's a big task to choose a bag which will strike the right note for every costume.

Such a bag may be made at home, with little difficulty. Black velvet, or, if one is lucky enough to have an old sealskin cap or collar; sealskin can be shaped into an odd, semioval bag. Jet beads on silk foundation may be appliqued on the seal or velvet in two bands. A tassel of the same beads finishes the lower part of the bag, while four chains of jet beads brought together with a small ring from which they lead to a larger wrist band, conclude the bag. An ordinary ring may be bought at any shop and bound with silk, covered with beads, to form this wrist band.—Betty Brown.

CHARMING MODEL FOR GIRLS

This is a modish costume of black satin with just a winsome touch of blue, green and gold in the embroidery. The short sleeves are as featured in the 1920 models.

"BREST" NEW SPRING COLOR

Pale Yellow, Sort of Mud Shade, Added to List for Coming Season.

In the line-up of fabrics and colors that are being shown for spring, and that are of course being adopted now by many, a pale yellow featured by one of the foremost designers of blouses has been christened "Brest." It is supposed to be a sort of mud color, but to call it simply mud color does not at all describe it or do justice to its charm.

It is not a bit too early to begin to think about spring clothes. That alluring season has a way of putting in an appearance shortly after the first of the year, somewhat unexpectedly speaking. It is interesting to note that for tailored frocks for street wear wool plaids are to have quite a vogue, if the models shown by style designers may be taken as an indication. Scotch plaid worsteds are skillfully combined with plain color wool fabrics and frocks entirely of plaid are not at all uncommon.

Taffeta, as usual, will be a fabric leader. One charming advance spring model shows a simple surplice waist of navy taffeta with the taffeta skirt covered all over with Chinese embroidery. The embroidery is done in tan and king's blue.

On both tailored suits and tailored wool fabric frocks for spring some of the style authorities are featuring a clever arrangement of pin tucks. These are used in novel ways. Bands made of the tucking are applied to skirts and also used as inset panels, etc., and wide, flaring cuffs, sometimes elbow length, of self-fabric, pin tucked, are shown on tailored suits.

STRAWS AND WINTER FABRICS

Spring Headgear Shows Interesting Combination of Hemp Braid and Angora Strips.

Hats have a most lamentable habit of becoming shabby, and since accessories (the term includes shoes, millinery, veils, neckwear, and all small items of apparel) may make or mar a woman's appearance, it is certainly of first importance that headgear should be kept in style and span condition and that as many new hats as possible shall be added to the wardrobe during the season.

Manufacturing milliners declare each season that women will be kept to hats made of warm weather material in summer and that straw hats simply will not be permitted to appear in January. But these self-same milliners started the trouble and each season now sees the unseasonable introduction of offerings that they declare they deplore. Clearance sales and spring "straws" arrived at about one and the same time this year; but one interesting feature in connection with these "straws" is the fact that so many of them show combinations of real winter fabric. For example, hemp braid and angora strips are blended to form many smart sports hats, and bits of fur are combined with straw braid in the development of some charming and becoming models.

Pettiebockers for Sports Wear.

For sports wear there are smart petticockers fashioned from woolen materials and they are very warm. Dull colors are chosen and pastel shades are well liked, too. Sometimes there are no frills on these sport bloomers, but they are finished with buttons at the bottom. These are comfortable for skating, golfing, motoring or when you take long hikes through the country.

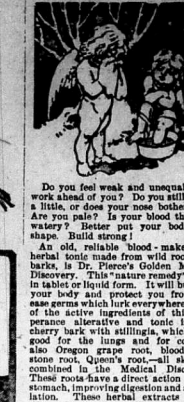
FITTINGS IN NEW HANDBAGS

So Complete Is Equipment That Cocktail Set, Cigarette and Match Cases Are Provided.

Much importance is attached to hand bags and their fittings. So complete are some of these fittings in the new bags, a motion picture actress could carry about a complete close-up makeup within its shallow depths.

This full equipment includes mirror, powder box, lip stick, nail file, button hook, cold cream box, scent bottle, memorandum pad and pencil. One ultra smart model includes a compact cocktail set, four small bottles in a case. Others have cigarette and match cases.

For Colds, Catarrh or Influenza



Do you feel weak and unequal to the work ahead of you? Do you tire out quickly a little, or does your nose bother you? Are you pale? Is your blood thin and watery? Better put your body into shape. Build strong!

An old, reliable blood-maker and herbal tonic made from wild roots and barks, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This "nature remedy" comes in tablet or liquid form. It will build up your body and protect you from disease germs which lurk everywhere. One of the active ingredients of this temperance alterative and tonic is wild cherry bark with stillingia, which is so good for the lungs and for coughs; also Oregon grape root, blood root, stone root, Queen's root,—all skillfully combined in the Medical Discovery. These roots have a direct action on the stomach, improving digestion and assimilation. These herbal extracts in the "Discovery" aid in blood-making and are best for scrofula. By improving the blood they fortify the body against an attack of grip or colds.

Catarrh should be treated, first, as a blood disease, with this alterative, Then, in addition, the nose should be washed daily with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

Send 10c for trial pkg. of Medical Discovery Tablets or Catarrh Tablets to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory, Bridgeburg, Ont.

AN IDEA IN EVENING WRAPS

This strikingly original outfit has a mole collar, large and beautiful, that forms the sleeves, and which is one of the novel features of this exquisite winter evening wrap of navy and silver brocade.

KEEP SPAT BUTTONS TIGHT

Sagging or Loose Fasteners Spoil Smartness of Modish Boot With Top Matching Costume.

Is there anything more distressing than sagging spat buttons? Buttoned shoes and buttoned spats are the fashion this year and both make the ankle and instep look very trim and dainty when the buttons are sewed on firmly, as they should be. One loose, sagging button can completely spoil the smartness of a modish buttoned boot or spat, of a dainty cloth spat, and there seems no excuse for the mark of untidiness. Do not wait until the button comes off, but tighten it up the moment it begins to look loose. Not only does the modern buttoned boot or spat call for the street costume and complete its correctness, but it also gives the ankle a trim and graceful look that is very attractive.

Dainty Trimming.

The cascade fringe trimming is dainty.

Heavy Stitching.

Heavy stitching is an excellent finishing.

WIRING IN EVENING FROCKS

Arrangement Extends Hips, Used in Simple Round Neck and in Short Sleeves.

Evening frocks, almost in every case, show the wired-out hips and full lines. The wiring is usually concealed by garlands of ribbon or flowers. A jade green gown is much ruffled as to the skirt, and is also wired and trimmed with wreaths of silver flowers, which are placed partly on and partly hanging below the edge of the ruffles. Silver ribbon forms the other trimming than the silver garlands.

A lavender chiffon dress has the simplest of trimming, just a row of mauve velvet violets concealing the wiring at the hips and the simple round neck and short sleeves as well as finished by the row of violets. Very short sleeves are also wired in this manner.

The tunic of a frock of black taffeta has inset at the sides two squares of the heaviest of silver filet, on which are carelessly laid garlands of silver flowers. This makes a striking note, as one may imagine, for the silver contrasts so strongly with the black. The bodice shows just a wide band of the silver filet at the top, which relieves the blackness of the dress. The short sleeves are also silver.

BACTERIA IN THE MILK

Bacteria, Yeasts and Moulds Greatly Influence Milk.

Most Bacterial Changes Are Hurtful —How Bacteria Gets Into Milk— How to Prevent Injury to the Milk.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

BACTERIA play a very important role in the milk and dairy industry. Practically all the natural changes either good or bad that take place in milk from the time it leaves the cow until the time it is consumed, or otherwise used, are due to the action of the various species of bacteria that gets into it, though sometimes yeasts and molds are involved.

If the milk is to be consumed as milk, then most of the changes that take place in it, as a result of bacterial action, are injurious. Exceptions to this are found in the prepared fermented milk, as Kephir, Koumiss and Bulgarian Milk; in these, however, the bacterial action is controlled and cultures of certain species of bacteria are added to the milk to bring about the desired changes.

Everybody knows that if a sample of ordinary milk is kept for a few days, particularly if it be not kept cold, it will sour or become gassy or ropy or putrid. This souring, ropiness, gas production and putrefaction, is brought about by different species of bacteria in the milk. As the changes in the milk which these bacteria produce are injurious and undesirable, everybody who has anything to do with the handling of milk should know how to prevent their occurrence.

In the ordinary methods of obtaining and handling milk it is impossible to prevent some bacteria from getting into it. With proper care, however, a large percentage of the bacteria that ordinarily get into milk can be prevented from getting in, and with proper handling of the milk the few that do get in can be prevented from producing any marked changes within a reasonable time. It is desirable, then, that those who have to do with the production and handling of milk should know how and why, as far as possible, the bacteria from getting into the milk and also how to prevent those that do get in from bringing about the changes which result in the spoiling of the milk.

How Bacteria Get into Milk.—Unless the cow's udder is diseased very few bacteria are present in the milk as it is drawn, and those that are present are of very little consequence. Thus the bacteria found in raw milk get into it during the milking operations and during the later handling of the milk.

Bacteria of many kinds are present in large numbers in a dusty atmosphere, on bits of hay, straw, cow hairs, manure, flies, dirty hands, dirty clothes, and in milk pails, cans, bottles, strainers, and other milk utensils that are not thoroughly washed and scalded. Consequently, if we are to keep bacteria out of the milk we must prevent the above-named substances from getting into the milk, and we must pay particular attention to the washing and thorough scalding of all milk utensils and in having clean hands and clothes.

It is generally considered that provided the milk is passed through a strainer when being filled into the cans from the milk pail all the objectionable matter that are removed from the milk, as dirt, bits of hay, straw, manure, cow hairs, flies, etc. This is a great mistake as the bacteria which were present on these when they dropped into the milk pail are washed off into the milk, and these bacteria pass readily through the finest strainers used. Consequently, steps must be taken to prevent these materials getting into the milk.

1. The atmosphere of the stable must be free as possible from dust during the milking operations. Any feeding, bedding down or cleaning up should be done at least an hour before, or left until after milking.

2. Cover-top or sanitary milk pails should be used instead of the wide open-top pails.

3. Doors and windows should be fly screened.

4. Cows should be kept clean and groomed so that bits of dirt, manure, hairs, etc., shall not fall from the cows' flanks into the pail during milking.

5. All milk utensils should be thoroughly washed and scalded every time before use.

How to Prevent Bacteria From Spoiling the Milk.—Even after all reasonable care has been taken to prevent bacteriological contamination of the milk as outlined above, some contamination will occur, that is, a few bacteria will get into the milk in some way or other. If these are followed by inutiplyy in the milk they will spoil it.

The best way to prevent their rapid multiplication in the milk is to chill it immediately in the cooling tank or refrigerator, and keep it cold until used. A small amount of bacterial multiplication will take place even at refrigeration temperatures, and this will show itself in the condition of the milk in course of time, but will not have been obtained under clean conditions and has been kept cold should be in excellent condition even after forty-eight days.

Summary of Milk Contamination Preventive Measures.—Prevent dust, cow hairs, bits of hay, straw, and manure, flies and drops of dirty water from getting into the milk during milking operations as outlined above. Thoroughly clean and scald all pails, cans, bottles and other utensils. Cool the milk at once down to refrigeration temperature and keep it cold until covered until used.—Prof. D. H. Jones, O. A. College, Guelph.

SWEET POTATOES.

Carefully Handled Crop Will Pay Well.

Sweet potatoes deserve as careful handling as apples. In fact, they will not stand the rough handling that apples are often subjected to in grading and packing. This statement may surprise many sweet potato growers who are not in the habit of taking pains to avoid bruising the product.

One of the chief barriers to the extension of sweet potato growing in this country is the inability of farmers to keep sweet potatoes in storage so that they can be placed on the market in winter when prices are good. Consequently most of the crop grown is consumed locally or sold at digging time when prices are low. Specialists of the Department of Agriculture believe that if storage methods and principles were better understood far more sweet potatoes would be available for winter use.

However, the success of the industry does not depend on careful handling alone. There are several serious fungi diseases, as this bulletin points out, the best known of which are black rot, stem rot and foot rot. The storage of sweet potatoes affected with black rot must necessarily result in heavy loss, since the disease spreads rapidly throughout the bins. Stem rot, on the other hand, does not produce any marked decay in storage, but it may open the way for storage rot organisms to enter the potato.

After sweet potatoes are dry and the surface moisture has dried off they should be carefully laid in cob-talmers holding about a bushel and hauled to a storage house. If the potatoes are to be stored in bins they should be poured carefully from the containers into the bins. There are some advantages in storage in crates rather than in bins. Crates permit the free circulation of air among the potatoes, a condition which cannot be so readily obtained if they are piled in a bin. The crate has an added advantage in that by its use as many potatoes can be taken out for the market at any one time during the winter as are desired without disturbing the remainder. Sweet potatoes will not stand frequent handling, and for that reason it is unwise to disturb a pile or bin unless they are all marketed at the same time.

Potatoes intended for storage should be dug as late in the fall as is consistent with weather conditions. This is usually just preceding frost or after the first light frost. Frozen potatoes will not keep, and it is likely that a heavy frost will injure them to some extent. It is advisable after a heavy frost to cut the vines at once and dig. To wait too long may mean that in order to avoid freezes the potatoes must be dug during bad weather. After the potatoes are dug they should be left exposed long enough to dry off the surface moisture. On a bright day this would require but an hour or two. On a very hot day, however, it would be desirable to hurry the potatoes to the shade after their surfaces have been dried in the sun.

Grading of milk and cream encourages the careful dairyman to do even better, and places the product on a higher basis. Paying by quality instead of by quantity would strengthen our dairy industry.

A prime requisite in getting a good crop yield is to get on the land as early in the spring and as often as possible. The tractor saves time, and therefore is of material aid in the securing of a bumper crop.

The principal object of manuring farm crops is to increase the yield but other results follow. The quality of the crop is improved. There is an upspring in some cases hastening its power to resist disease is strengthened, and its feeding value made greater.

Fertilizing the Garden.

The increasing scarcity of manure, especially in the cities, is causing gardeners to look for a substitute. Much has been written about the use of nitrate of soda for garden crops.

One statement very commonly made is to the effect that nitrogen is the chief element in producing the rapid growth desired in most garden crops, but a careful study will soon show that this is a half truth which may lead to serious disappointment.

In the farm crops grown in a five-year rotation at the Ohio Experiment Station, nitrate of soda used alone has increased the total weight of crops by 19 per cent., while acid phosphate used alone has increased the weight by 31 per cent.

When the two applications of nitrate of soda and acid phosphate have been combined, the yield has been increased by 60 per cent.

To use nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia without also using some carrier of phosphorous is to lose a large part of the potential value of the nitrogen carrier.

The Ohio Station's experiments have shown conclusively that where rapid growth and early maturity are desired it is necessary that phosphorous that should receive chief attention in the fertiliser.

PROTECTING POULTRY

HOW TO TAKE CARE OF DRESSED MEAT.

Shipping of Chickens to the Market Calls for Scrupulous Attention to All Matters of Detail—Darkness Is as Vital as the Low Temperature of Refrigerator Cars.

Scrupulous care in pre-cooling a refrigerator car for shipping dressed poultry, always a matter of importance, is doubly so now, in the opinion of food-research experts. The greater necessity for care comes, in the first place, of the fact that, following the stress of war-time transportation, the refrigerator equipment of the country is in a run-down condition. The car should be carefully examined, the experts say, to see that it admits not even a pin point of light. Then it should be tested and, if it fall short of standard, the car should be no hesitation about rejecting it and calling on the railroad agent for a car that will meet the requirements. Extreme care, the experts believe, is essential just now for the preservation of poultry in transit. An authority on the subject has just issued the following definite information as to how satisfactory results are to be attained:

"When the refrigerator car is set for icing, enter it and with doors and hatches tightly closed look carefully for any crack or point of daylight. The car should be absolutely black with not a pin point of light anywhere. If there are distinct cracks around the doors or hatches, the car will not maintain sufficiently low temperature and should not be iced for the hauling of dressed poultry or any other commodity requiring ice and salt refrigeration. Be sure also that the drain pipes are open and in good working order.

"The selected car should be set for icing at least twenty-four hours before it is to be loaded. Its bunkers should then be filled three-quarters full with finely broken ice; that is, no piece should be larger than a man's fist. When the bunkers are three-quarters full, tamp the ice down well so that all cracks and crannies are filled. Then add one-quarter of the calculated amount of salt on the 12 per cent. basis. For instance, if the bunker holds 5,000 pounds of ice, when three-quarters full it will contain 3,750 pounds. On top of this amount of ice scatter 150 pounds of coarse gray rock salt. Mix this salt very lightly with the top ice and directly on top of it place more crushed ice until the bunker is full. Then add the remainder of the calculated amount of salt, which, in this case, would be 450 pounds. Mix it very lightly with the fine ice so that the salt will not penetrate into the mass of ice more than four or five inches; level the surface and quickly close the hatches.

"With both bunkers so iced and salted, the car should stand for twenty-four hours. Then, in order to make sure that the temperature is right for loading, a man provided with a thermometer should enter as quickly as possible by opening one side or end door, which should be tightly closed immediately. The man should stand midway between the doors holding the thermometer about four feet from the floor until the mercury has responded to the car temperature, which ordinarily is accomplished in from three to five minutes, depending on the quality of the thermometer. The temperature of the car at this point should not be above 36 degrees F. If it is more than 38 degrees at this point, it is dangerous to load the car for a haul requiring intensive refrigeration. Unless the shipper is willing to take chances on the condition in which his load will arrive at the point of consignment, communicate with the railroad agent and request a car which is able to refrigerate the dressed poultry properly.

"All refrigerator cars should be provided with a floor rack four inches in the clear, built of lengthwise bearings made from 2x4 lumber and crosswise slats made from 1x3 lumber, with 1½ inch spaces between. These crosswise slats are nailed to the lengthwise stringers. They do not interfere with trucking the load in the car. They should extend across the door sill so that no part of the car which is hardest to refrigerate and where air circulation is most needed. All railroad refrigerator cars as rapidly as possible are being equipped with racks which are fastened to the side walls so that they can be turned back for cleaning."

Provide Water for Horses.

Walter Moore, a well-known writer, says: "It is a common thing for farmers to water their horses in the hayfield from morning to night, watering them only at noon. This is done even on days of excessive heat. The driver usually has two or more refreshing drinks in the middle of the morning, and again in the afternoon; but the horses who are equally as thirsty, go without. This want of water is not only distressing, but it causes the horses to drink to excess at noon and result from continued dry spells, according to the plan of an ingenious farmer. He amassed a lot of half-gallon and gallon cans, each with a pin perforated them with small nail-holes, plied the hoe, and sank each can to the level of the ground between rows of garden stuff.

When the cans were filled with water the moisture reached the roots of the plants by a direct, business-like route. A gallon of water, this thoughtful person found, went three times as far, when administered in this fashion, as when poured on in the usual way. Figuring out the profits, it was found that each minute thus spent was worth three ears of corn, half a dozen cabbage, eleven radishes, and two turnips.

Apple Aphids.

The application of lime-sulphur (1 to 8), nicotine sulphur (1 to 800) combination applied at the delayed, dormant period gives practically a perfect control for apple aphids and makes unnecessary a separate, earlier application of lime-sulphur for San Jose Scale, according to the report of experiments carried on at the Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station.

HEAVY HORSES WANTED

MANY GOOD ANIMALS HAVE BEEN EXPORTED.

Demand Has Been Brisk of Late, and the Quality of the Horse Secured In Canada Is Improving, Although It Is Generally Recognized That More Imported Stallions Are Needed to Encourage Breeding.

Encouragement for heavy horse breeders is contained in the news that drafters weighing from 1,700 to 1,800 pounds are being purchased for shipment to Great Britain, at prices that guarantees a substantial profit to farmers who are willing to part with their good animals at this season when horse power is so much in demand on the farms. The particular source of this demand is a point in favor of the prediction that the demand will continue for some length of time—in fact, long enough to justify breeders in resuming operations in their line of business that have been neglected for the past three or four years.

Doubtless the demand for heavy horses to go to the Old Country has been incited by the improved quality of the general run of drafters in Canada, and it must be conceded that the efforts of the Ontario Stallion Enrolment Board are responsible in a large degree for the improved state of affairs. From now on, that is to say, since the passing of the scrub stallion, still further improvement may be looked for in the general horse stock of the province, and the benefit resulting will be felt most largely by those men who make a specialty of the heavy breeds.

That the supply of horses is short, is due to some extent to the fact that scrub stallions have been entirely ruled out so recently, but the loss is more than covered by the gain in quality of the young drafters that are coming on to market age. A drawback to the industry, in view of the fact that only pure-bred sires can now be used, is the shortage of good ones. There are quite a few good Canadian-breds, especially among the Clydes, but they are not numerous enough to make a mark in increasing breeding operations in the province as a whole. In the West, Percherons are coming rapidly to the front because of the good imported animals of the breed that are offered for service, and if only as good Clydesdale blood were brought into Ontario, the Clyde men would have to hustle for improved specimens of the Clydesdale to keep in the lead, let the business go to the Percheron men.

There is no getting away from the fact that the Clyde and Percheron are favorite heavy draft horse in the East and that British buyers still prefer stock of this breed. A comparison of the prices paid for breeders and sires of the two breeds bear this out. Yet, although the quality of draft horses in Ontario is better than it ever was at any previous time, the quality of the Clydes will have to be strictly maintained, and improved if they are to hold their place with such competition as already threatens from the Percherons. It was nice for Canadians to see a Canadian-bred Clyde take the championship away from imported horses at the last Guelph Winter Fair, but was that victory for the home-bred entirely a thing of merit about if actual business is considered? The home-bred won on his merits, but would he win in Scotland? What the heavy horse breeding industry in Ontario needs right now is a few or rather a good many of the sort of horses that can compete with very near winning in such company as is offered at the Scottish shows. If we can't have the stallions, the Old Country people can't expect to get the workers of the right type.

Colony Posch Newman has been in service for a couple of years on the farms of Mr. J. A. Saywell and Hon. S. F. Tolmie, Minister of Agriculture, with the type and production which are the back of him. He also will be a needed acquisition to the Bell Farm herd.

Concrete Smoke House.

A smoke house built of slabs of concrete instead of logs, and having an underground channel through which the smoke is led to and from a fire built outside, is an innovation in smoke houses, constructed by Mr. Fred Traub, of Doon, Ia.

The heat from the fire is partly lost in the passage of the smoke through the underneath vent, an advantage in smoking meat, because otherwise the temperature might be high enough for the fats to drip. The fire-pot is placed outside at the back of the concrete house, where the fire can be easily replenished and controlled.

The concrete smoke house is not only burglar-proof to a greater extent than are wooden structures, but it is fireproof.—Popular Science Monthly.
